My 10, 11, 15, 9, 2, 9 is an ostrich.

My 3, 12, 9, 11 is a girl's name.

My 6, 4, 13, 5, 11, 9, 11 is a territory of the U. S.

My 3, 7, 8, 3, 11 is a girl's name.

My whole is a great natural curiosity.

CHARADE—VII.

My first is changeable, but beautiful too, And woman is oft compared to it;

But woman is constant, faithful and true And the slanderer himself well knew it.

In the pathway of life my second sheds shields

But the air, the medium transmits it, While oft in my while the sad love treads

Who has just heard pronounced his ipse dixit.

CHARADE—VIII.

My first is the name Pater Patrie had My second's a measure for silk,

My third confined to the teeth makes us mad,

My whole makes clover and milk.

CONUNDRUMS.

With what tribe in the Bible would you rank Moses?

Why is a barber like a mother?

Correct answers from Mrs. S. S. S., Mr. B. S. R. and E. V.

IF I WERE YOU.

What would I do, if I were you?

First thing, I'd make a rule

To put my hat and boots in place,

When I come home from school.

What would I do, if I were you?

I would not pout and cry,

Because I could't have my way

About a piece of pie.

What would I do, if I were you?

I'd speak a pleasant word

To this and that one in the house,

And not be sour as card.

What would I do, if I were you?

I'd not fly off apace,

Into a raging passion, when

Another took my place.

And when a body asked my help,

I'd try to do a favor,

So that it should not always have

A disoblighing flavor.

If I were you, my little friend,

I'd try to be so good

That my example, all around

Might follow if you could.

I'd go to Jesus now, and give

To him my naughty heart;

Ask him to make it new and pure,

And His own love impart.

Then 'twill be easy to obey

His law and parents' rule

And you'll be happy, too, as good

At home, or play, or school.

BOYS, MIND YOUR COMMAS.

The comma like the tongue, is a little thing,

and like it will make good sense or nonsense, just according as it is used.

Take, for instance, the old nursery rhyme:

With the commas misplaced, it is so nonsensical that it needs a commentary to explain it:

Every lady in the land

Has twenty nails on each hand,

Five and twenty on hands and feet;

This is true without deceit.

Alter the position of the commas and the meaning is clear:

Every lady in the land

Has twenty nails, on each hand

Five, and twenty on hands and feet;

This is true without deceit.

An actioner office advertised a lot of chairs which, he said, "had been used by school children without backs."—Youth's Companion.

The omission of a comma has frequently given a very awkward turn to a sentence. We remember an epitaph which suffered severely from such an oversight. It ran pretty much as follows:

"Erected to the memory of John Phillips, accidentally shot as a mark of affection by his brother."

A printer, mending with the verdict of a coroner's jury, struck out a comma after the word "apoplexy," making it read thus:

"Deceased came to his death by excessive drinking, producing apoplexy in the minds of the jury."

Grange Secrets Revealed.

HOW INITIATIONS ARE CONDUCTED.

[From the Randolph Enterprise.]

On being brought into the ante-room of the lodge (Greenwood Temple, No. 101.) I was told that I had been balloted for and accepted. My informant, who was securely masked by what I afterward learned was a large burdock leaf perforated with holes for the eyes, told me that if I valued my life it would be necessary for me to strip. As I did consider that considerable worth to me, and as he italicized his wishes by carelessly playing with a seven-shooter, I withdrew from my garments with eagerness. My masked friend then furnished me with the gaiter of the first degree—called "The Festive Ploughboy," which consists of a long, tomato necktie.

The grand hallingsign of distress is made by gently closing the left eye, laying the right forefinger alongside the nose, and violently wagging the ears. It requires practice, but the advantages are intense. It also has an important signification which you will do well to heed. The closing of the eye signifies that in all your dealings with mankind you are bound to have an eye to business. Laying the finger alongside the nose is emblematical of wisdom, and places you at once among the "knowing ones." This is extremely handy in propagating new weather, and saves the wear and tear of almanacs. Wagging the ear signifies solemnity of purpose, and is thought to be emblematical of confidence in happy hours. It is also supposed by some profound scholars to have a distinct reference to apple-dumplings, but this fact is so much obscure by the dust of ages. It is taken that you are one of us you will not be balloted. When one granger desires to ascertain "for sure" if there is another of the order in the room, he raises himself gently by the slack of his unmentionables, scratches his off thigh with his near foot, and remarks in a voice of thunder: "Are there any grangers about?" The answer is "None wax."

I was then interrupted Mr. Editor, by a volley fired into open window, evidently intended for me. Fortunately I escaped without a scratch, and which is of more consequence, succeeded in fetching off my precious manuscript. This is about all there is in the ceremony of any importance. I must leave the country at once—armed men are at my heels. They know that I am writing to expose them. You may hear from me again by mail, if I should find it best to explore the other degrees. Until then adieu.—From your sacred friend, B. POLK.

NOTICE.—This ceremony of initiation is used during the absence of lady members. Their initiatory ceremonies are entirely different, being much simplified as they should be.

A CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

A ludicrous case of mistaken identity occurred in Montreal a day or two ago, through the unfortunate resemblance of two young gentlemen, residents of that city, one of whom was recently married while the other remains a bachelor. The married person went to a dinner party. The unmarried one, as it so happened, was similarly occupied on the same evening, but, unluckily or his reputation, he made a misapprehension as to his capacity for festive wine, and spoiled his night's amusements. While a glimmer of reason remained he endeavored to get home without attracting attention. By the time the poor young man reached a cab stand his mind had become so confused that he was unable to remember either his own name or the street on which he lived. As he was engaged in gesticulating somewhat wildly to a cab-driver, a friend of the married young gentleman happened to pass, noticed his plight, and, commiserating his identity with the latter, pushed him into a cab, whispered to the driver, and continued on his way. The result of this friendly act was the conveyance of the unmarried man to the home of the married man, where his lamentable condition, as may easily be supposed, created anything but a pleasant surprise. The young wife was, of course deeply mortified at the figure he cut in her father's house. Subsequently as he lay asleep upon a sofa, the father-in-law entered the room to remonstrate with him. After wasting much good advice, the father-in-law suddenly discovered the mistake that had been made by his daughter, and was in the act of trying to persuade the latter, probably much against her will that the intoxicated young man was not her husband, when the real husband put an end to the dispute, and greatly increased the embarrassment of the household, by letting himself in at the hall-door with a lutecky.

The probable result upon the Louisiana muddle will be the adoption of the bill of CARGENT'S BILL, for a new election in that State.

The Democratic Standard, it is said, will introduce a resolution, declaring the McENERY government the legal, legitimate government of the State, and in case of its defeat will then support Senator CARGENT'S BILL. Either plan is preferable to the continuation
