KEEP BEFORE THE PEOPLE!

Gov. Caldwell and his friends gave the mechanics and laborers of this State the first lien law they ever had.

Judge Merrimon and his friends told the people of this State in 1868 that every vote for our present Constitution was a vote for negro supremacy. Was their assertion true?

Who told the people of Wake last summer that the Convention was voted down they would have to pay fifty dollars tax on every thousand dollars' worth of property. Answer—Judge Merrimon.

It is urged by the Democratic organs that the law is to be enforced in State and municipal elections. This is done to make it more obnoxious, if that be possible, to their party. But, unfortunately, this is an error. The law applies only to Presidential and Congressional elections, though we heartily wish it could be made to apply to all others—N. Y. Tribune.

When the rebellious traitors are overwhelmed in the field, and scattered like leaves before an angry wind, it must not be to return to Peaceful and Contented Home. They must send every man, woman and child to the river in the anxious eyes of mothers and the rags of children. Horace Greeley, Tribune, May 1st, 1861.

From the Tribune, 1871. "I hold our Government bound by its duty of protecting our citizens in their fundamental rights, to pass and enforce laws for the extirpation of the execrable ku klux conspiracy; and if it has not the power to do it, then I say our Government is no Government, but a sham. I therefore on every proper occasion advocated and justified the ku klux act. I hold it especially desirable for the South; and if it does not prove strong enough to effect its purpose, I hope it will be made stronger and stronger."

Yesterday was the anniversary of that memorable fight, the Battle of Bull Run, where the Federal army broke just before the Confederate army retreated, and of course it was claimed as a Confederate triumph. All thinking men admit that this was the most serious disaster that could possibly have happened to the Southern cause. Before this battle the Administration believed that the "erring sisters" could be induced to return to their allegiance, and that but little blood would be shed. Regiment after regiment was refused by the authorities at Washington and no authority could be obtained for the formation of fresh troops until after that battle. The Confederates, flushed with this doubtful victory, became more firm in their demands for "Southern independence" and the North, too long lethargic, awoke and prepared for a bloody war. The result is well known. The Yankees did run at Bull Run; they ran fast and disgracefully, but they ran a different way afterwards and kept running Southward until they halted at Appomattox, to witness the unconditional surrender of their enemies. And how were the Confeds treated. General Grant with that magnanimity only common to great minds, paroled the vast army and said, tell your boys to take home their horses to make a crop!

To day two men stand before the people of the United States, as candidates for the Presidency. One, the editor of a newspaper, used all his great influence in urging an advance of the Federal army when it was not in a condition to move. The Tribune's "On to Richmond" will not soon be forgotten. Horace Greeley had already done what he could to arouse the passions of the North and a few weeks before this battle had said that the rebels "must find poverty at their firesides, and see privation in the anxious eyes of mothers and the rags of children!" The other candidate, General Grant, met these "rebellious traitors"—according to Greeley—and conquered them. Did he desire to see "privation in the anxious eyes of mothers and the rags of children?" No. A thousand times no! He prevented Andy Johnson from arresting General Lee and other prominent officers, insisting upon the sacredness of his parole, and told the men of their command to go to their homes and make crops! Look at the contrast between the two men. And what a strange position we are in to-day. The men who followed Gen. Grant to victory, still love and sustain him in his acts of kindness to the confederate soldiers, while a majority of the confederate soldiers have forgotten all about the magnanimity of the great General and are throwing up their hats and shouting the praises of Horace Greeley! To our mind it is the most astonishing action we have ever witnessed, utterly unaccountable unless it be a sacrifice of all principle, and a raid simply for office! How can it be otherwise when the Southerners are living upon their own soil, by the influence of General Grant, when Greeley said that "an allotment of land in Virginia would be a fitting reward to the brave fellows who have gone to fight their country's battles."

Keep it Before the People. The following article was published in the Wilmington Daily Journal of this city on Sunday morning July 21st, 1872. It is needless to say that the Journal is an ardent supporter of Greeley and Brown, and is one of the leading Democratic papers in the State. We ask a careful perusal of this article by our brethren of the Northern press, that they may form a correct estimate of the "liberal" feeling in North Carolina. SENATOR WILSON—21ST JULY, 1861. The presence of Senator Wilson in our city about this particular date, involuntarily brings us to the memories of other days. On the 18th day of July, 1861, was fought the preliminary battle of Bull Run; on the 21st of same month and year, was fought upon the banks of the same stream and over the same ground almost, the first battle of Manassas. Now it so happens that this large hearted Christian, this South loving Massachusetts Senator, who now calls himself Henry Wilson, but who was born to another name, just eleven years ago to-day, regarded himself, such at Bull Run. Indeed, we never hear of Wilson that we do not think of Bull Run, and we never hear of Bull Run that Wilson does not at once spring up before our mind's eye. And we doubt not that our plucky Senator often returns in his dreams to the spot he visited this day eleven years ago. The Senator said on Thursday: "No braver men ever lived than you of the South! You gave your lives and property for your cause." Well might Henry Wilson say this to a Southern audience on the 18th day of July, and with even more appropriateness may he repeat it to-day.

The 18th and 21st of July are proud anniversaries in Southern annals. It was upon these days in the year 1861, that the little stream of Bull Run was made famous. It will be remembered that on this day eleven years ago, the Northern army was ignominiously, shamefully and disgracefully driven back to the very gates of Washington, by the much despised "Southern chivalry." The route and panic of that day still stand before the world without a parallel.

It will be remembered also, that this same Henry Wilson, Senator from Massachusetts, was one of a party of ladies and gentlemen (I) who on that day left the Nation's capitol, and went a pic-nicking on Virginia soil. The gay party went with carriages, and ambulances, and wagons, and wines and liquors, and hamper baskets of provisions, and ice and music, and banners, and bethought them, after dining upon the shady banks of some purring brook, to see the fun of blue-coats driving gray-jackets before them like chaff before the wind. This Christian, large-hearted, South loving Wilson and his gay and festive party did indeed find a brook, and for a while all went as merry as a marriage bell. But the little stream bore no love for them, and ere long its waters, as they purled and bubbled and meandered, musically murmured: "Run, Yankee, run, Beauregard catch you! Run, Yankee, run, Beauregard catch you!"

And Yankee did run, sure enough, straight for Washington! And the Southern boys ran too, but they ran straight for the Yankees. The large-hearted Christian, Senator Wilson, and his party, started "to hum" at once, but they had bad luck. The terrible Sudley bridge had to be crossed. Some of the ladies, it is said, lost their clothes in the terrible jam and panic. One lady, indeed, horrible to relate, was obliged to ride "straddle and bare-back," and being unaccustomed to such exercise, it is said, suffered much. Finally, however, the party, no longer gay and festive, reached the Nation's Capitol without loss of life or limb.

Imagine the saintly Senator astride a horse bare-back, with blind-bridle, riding nip and tuck, for dear life, with one of the gay and festive ladies mounted in like style, his long limbs dangling and protruding far through his breeches legs, in frantic efforts to quicken his jaded steed!

Of the lady's appearance we have simply to remark that it was summer time, and that large hoops were then much in style. Then, as now, to Bull Run as to Wilmington, this pious, casting hypocrite, with his gay ladies, came to witness the defeat of Southern men, and to gloat over their death struggles and dying agonies.

Did ever mortal man, outside of the Cannibal Islands, deliberately select a fresh battle-field for a pic-nic ground, for a place to feast and dance, to eat and to drink, and to pop champagne corks and to enjoy the society of gentle woman?

One would think that an ill spot for enjoyment, where the earth was freshly torn up by cannon ball—where trees were standing with shattered trunks and broken limbs still dangling, and falling at times—where dead men and dying were lying about everywhere—where the air was filled with moanings and groanings, and worse and more horrible still, that terrible, piercing cry which, when once heard, can never be forgotten so long as life shall last, the cry of a wounded man calling for water! water! No man who has lain a night upon a battle-field can fail to remember it.

We venture to say that outside of the Cannibal Islands, never before did a party of ladies and gentlemen ever seek such accessories to social pleasure! And yet this man Wilson boasts himself to be overflowing with the milk of human kindness! To us he seems to possess the nature of a hyena, rather than that of a man.

The man who went with a party of ladies and gentlemen to junket and feast, and carouse amid dead and dying Southern, cannot deceive us with a few soft words of cant and hypocrisy. We well remember the stench of that same battle field upon which the Christian, large-hearted, South-loving Senator came for a pic-nic, but that stench came not from the bodies in gray jackets!

But the pic-nic did not turn out as the Senator anticipated. The agonies and struggles he witnessed were those of his own friends, and we doubt not as the Senator saw how small a crowd was present to greet him here he thought that his present pic-nic gave plain promise of an ending like that at Bull Run.

The 18th July is a black day in Wilson's almanac, as black in 1872 as the 21st July, 1861, when he harried not to listen to the sweet suggestive rippling of the brook as it murmured "Run, Yankee Run, Beauregard catch you. Run, Yankee Run, Beauregard catch you."

The Hermit of Chiselhurst has remained remarkable quiet for the past few months. How he will act and what effect his action will have on the political fate of France remains a mystery. That he has deep and well laid plans we cannot doubt France will suffer.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

The College boat races are soon to take place. Harvard, Yale, Amherst, Williams, Brown and other schools are to participate. Harvard will win.

The Alabama claims are being forced through the Board of Arbitration, at a pace hitherto unknown in the annals of diplomatic legislation and the American public will soon be acquainted with the results of the Tribunal.

Brazil declines to receive the plenipotentiary of the Argentine Republic. The Empire of Brazil which has been very moderate in its pretensions, and which has always by fair or foul endeavored to avoid war, has at last been forced by its neighboring State into a direct demonstration. Brazil will prove by force of arms its claims to honest government.

Senator Sumner has declared for Greeley. Much doubt has been expressed as to the Hon. Senator's course, but we have all along been of the opinion that his self made grievances would force him into this track. Although Senator Sumner has been a true friend to the colored man, his ambition has been foiled in minor points by Gen. Grant, and he thus takes the advantage of a fierce political strife to regain his position.
