

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT: ULYSSES S. GRANT Of Illinois.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT: HENRY WILSON, Of Massachusetts.

ELECTORAL TICKET.

FOR THE STATE AT LARGE: MARCUS ERWIN, of Buncombe; SAMUEL F. PHILLIPS, of Wake.

- FOR THE CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS: 1. Edward Ransome, of Tyrrell; 2. William F. Loftin, of Lenoir; 3. Thomas M. Argo, of Orange; 4. Henry Watson, of Davidson; 5. William B. Hyman, of Lincoln; 6. James G. Ramsey, of Rowan; 7. James M. Justice, of Rutherford.

KEEP BEFORE THE PEOPLE!

It is urged by the Democratic organs that the law is to be enforced in State and municipal elections. This is done to make it more obnoxious, if that is possible, to their party. But, unfortunately, this is an error. The law applies only to Presidential and Congressional elections, though we heartily wish it could be made to apply to all others.

When the rebellious Traitors are overwhelmed in the field, and scattered like leaves before an angry wind, it must not be to return to Peaceful and Contented Homes. THEY MUST FIND POVERTY AT THEIR FIRESIDES, AND SEE PRIVATION IN THE ANXIOUS EYES OF MOTHERS AND THE RAES OF CHILDREN.

"I hold our Government bound by its duty of protecting our citizens in their fundamental rights, to pass and enforce laws for the extirpation of the execrable ku klux conspiracy; and if it has not the power to do it, then I say our Government is no Government, but a sham. I therefore on every proper occasion advocated and justified the ku klux act. I hold it especially desirable for the South; and if it does not prove strong enough to effect its purpose, I hope it will be made stronger and stronger."

An infamous article, with the above title appeared in the Raleigh Standard, in 1868, which was immediately repudiated by the proprietors of the paper, and the writer discharged. Although this was done immediately and the ar-paper in the State, several Democratic papers keep extracts of this article standing at the head of their editorial columns. We are reliable informed that the writer of this article is one of the editors of the New York Tribune, now the leading Greeley organ of the United States.

"I have listened with unminged horror to some of the testimony which has been brought before you. The outrages proceed are shocking to humanity - they admit of neither excuse or justification; they violate every obligation which law and nature imposes upon men; they show that the parties engaged were brutal, insensible to the obligations of humanity and religion. The day will come, however, if it has not already arrived, when they will deeply lament it. Even if justice shall not overtake them, there is one tribunal from which there is no hope. It is their own judgment - that tribunal which sits in the breast of every living man - that small, still voice that thrills through the heart - the soul of the mind, and as it speaks, gives happiness or sorrow - the voice of conscience, the voice of God. If it has not already spoken to them in tones which have startled them to the enormity of their conduct, I trust, in the mercy of Heaven, that that voice will speak before they shall be called above to account for the transactions of this world. That it will so speak to make them penitent, and that trusting in the dispensations of Heaven, whose justice is dispensed with mercy, when they shall be brought before the bar of their great tribunal, so to speak, that incomprehensible tribunal, there will be found in the fact of their penitence, or in their previous lives, some grounds upon which God may say PARDON."

It is amusing to see the gushing innocence with which our opponents reiterate the growing popularity of their cause and the corresponding depression of the "Radicals." Their innocent remarks of accession to their ranks, and publishing for the hundredth time, the names of Gratz Brown, Sumner, Schurz, & Co., is especially rich. One of our contemporaries of this morning carries the joke so far as to quote GREELEY as an accession to their ranks! This caps the climax on all we have yet seen in the campaign. And our contemporary says "During the last ten days our friends seem everywhere to have been inspired with new hope." Where or from what source they derive their consolation, we are not informed, except that they expect to carry New York and Pennsylvania in October. Before the Maine election, they expected to reduce our majority to 6,000 and had strong hopes of working it down to 4,000 but the late returns come piling in and we find that there are no renegade republicans in that State, and instead of the reduced majority claimed by the Greeleyrats the noble old State piles of a majority of SEVENTEEN THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED AND EIGHTY TWO for our nominees.

The thinking men who are managing the Greeleyrat movement, feel no such elation over the result. They see too plainly the hand writing on the wall, which will soon put an end to the feast and consign their great Chappaquack to sylvan shades, and horticultural pursuits. Even these addresses at Fairs and before every farmers' club in the West won't help their cause, but will hurt their Fairs, because the farmers meet at these gatherings to learn of improvements in the production of crops, and don't desire at such times to be forced to hear political tirades. It is in exceedingly poor taste to force a political harangue down their throats when they are gathered together for another purpose.

Mr. Greeley has now adopted the advice he has been giving to every one for the past ten years—"Go West." He knows there is no chance for him in the eastern States, for even Connecticut is showing him the cold shoulder and he is going to try to raise a little enthusiasm now in the Western States. We are content. The New England elections show the benefit of his speeches there, and we rejoice that our Western friends will have an opportunity to hear his whining voice, and be correspondingly disgusted.

We do not believe that Mr. Greeley will receive as large a vote as did Seymour in 1868. The "straight outs," who prefer to be right (in their own estimation) rather than to elect a President, are becoming a formidable party. Already the wise men of that faith are joining it, and in November, the A. T. B. Grant party will find itself supinely lying, with no organization, party or platform. Their overthrow will be complete, overwhelming and glorious, and the straight outs will be masters of the opposition situation.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

The Republicans of Birmingham (England) object to paying the expenses of the reception of Piase Aurther.

The Nord, a newspaper published in Brussels, in the interest of the Russian government, categorically denies the report that the Czar will demand the abrogation of the Treaty of Paris as a consideration for the co-operation of Russia with Austria and Prussia.

A large number of medical and other scientific men have organized as an American Public Health Association, with Stephen Smith, of New York, president. Various important subjects were referred to special committees. The present number of members is 95, all well-known workers in the field of sanitary improvement in the cities of the United States and Canada. The next meeting will be held at Washington, the last week in February.

President Thiers, when visiting the United States steamer Shenandoah, on Saturday, complimented her commander, Captain Wells, on the excellent condition of his ship and the discipline of the crew. He expressed the hope that friendly relations would always endure between France and the United States. Captain Wells replied, cordially reciprocating the good wishes of the President, and thanking him for the honor conferred on the American Navy by a visit from the Chief of the French Republic.

A special dispatch to the N. Y. Herald from London gives the following sensational news: Representatives of the Cuban Junta are in council here in the city engaged in arranging for a loan of the amount of twenty millions of dollars, to be used for the purposes of purchasing army supplies and of co-operating in the effort to elect Horace Greeley to the Presidency of the United States. The Cuban agents act in the latter instance with the understanding of the recognition of Cuba as an independent State by America in case Mr. Greeley is elected.

As the sweet little song bird Pauline Lucca is attracting so much attention in New York, and of course elsewhere, we publish the following in relation to her, taken from the New York Herald:

The lowering weather yesterday morning interfered with the proposed visit of Mme. Lucca to a photographic gallery. About one o'clock she took a drive in the Park with her parents, returning home about four o'clock. She expressed herself highly delighted with the beautiful garden of the American metropolis and said that she must visit it at every opportunity during her stay here. Immediately on her return she insisted upon a promenade on Broadway, and Mr. Brentano in Union square, buried among his books, was roused by a musical voice inquiring, "Haben Sie eine Deutsche Bibliothek?" On looking up he saw the dainty little figure and merry countenance of the Queen of Song. She next visited Christian's, in University place. In the evening she stepped over to the Belvidere House to pay a visit to Miss Liebhart, the prima donna of the Rubinstein troupe. She is restless in her vivacity and exuberance of spirits, and remaining indoors all day is to her what a gilded cage is to a nightingale. She warbles all day in the house as spontaneously as a bird, and her joyous manner is like sunshine to all around her. But perhaps our readers would like to hear the fair artist speak herself. Here is an episode out of her early youth, related in her own words:

When I was sent to a boarding school I was not nine. I had previously been to a day school, but as a rich man's child, and as such no one ever learned anything. I soon found out how bitter was the change. It was long before I could silence my childish heart, and put up quietly with all the humiliations and slights to which I was subjected, although, however, I managed to do so. But I was destined to achieve a triumph even here. About a year and a half elapsed, and an examination was fast drawing near. Every one else looked forward to it on the tip-toe of excitement, but I awaited it with perfect indifference. I knew very well that no questions would be put to me. Every day a master used to give us lessons in singing from twelve to about one. The reader must not imagine, however, that there was any regular course of instruction; the girls had to sing to a violin, and were mechanically drilled, like so many canary birds. The lesson was attended by only a few, because it had to be paid for extra. I was permitted to take part in it, not as a favor, for I was never to sing, but in the absence of a desk, I served to hold the music for the others. Previous to the examination my schoolmates had a number of songs drilled into them, which song they were to sing to the Examiner and the general public. I recollect this striking me at the time as indescribably absurd. The examination approached nearer and nearer. We were all admirably prepared. The mistress of the school, an old maid, got ready her best cap, which never failed to inspire us with a feeling of reverential awe. At last the grand day came. We had all been ordered to wear a certain toilet, a command which placed my poor mother in a state of no slight embarrassment. As we had been told, too, we put on the most solemn, anxious faces, and awaited, with beating hearts, the course of events. Gradually the room was filled with parents, guardians, brothers, and sisters, who, of course, brought with them a swarm of friends and acquaintances. "He" only, the great, the deeply feared man, the Examiner, was still wanting. As a matter of course, I was placed on the last bench, in order, as I was laughingly, and thereby consolingly, informed, that I might look like a "big girl," though I was a bit of a thing hardly as tall as the bench on which I sat. The examination went off very well. I was called on once, at the very moment I was not thinking the least of such a thing, and had just made myself as comfortable as possible. Of course, I could not answer a word, and sat down again amid the derisive laughter of the other girls, while the mistress frowned severely. The Examiner, however, put on a most knowing look, as if he considered my answer extremely clever. So things proceeded very satisfactorily. When the examination was nearly over those girls rose who were to be examined in singing—I was involuntarily brought back by the rustling to the present, and on looking up, beheld, two paces off, my mother, who, quite pale and with tears in her eyes, was gazing at me reproachfully. This affected me more than derision or the severity of my teachers. I felt ashamed. The thought, "How can you make amends for your fault?" flashed through my brain like lightning. I had been told not to play the part of the desk during the examination. I was to sit still while the others were singing. Suddenly I thought, "You shall sing." I knew all the songs by heart, but how was I to manage so as to be allowed to sing one? However, the idea of pleasing my mother did not permit me to take account of any obstacles. When the signal for standing up was given, I rose too, and went forward with the others. The mistress cast a furious and, at the same time, astounded look at me. I did not observe it. In order not to make a disturbance, nothing was said. When all the others had sung in turn, each her particular piece, the master was about to get up. But the Examiner whom I kept staring at throughout the proceedings, turned suddenly to me. "Well, and what can you sing for us?" he asked. "Anything," I answered boldly. "Oh—indeed! Well then, sing the last little song." I turned up my nose somewhat, for the song was a very insignificant one, and I wanted to sing the "Ave, Maria," which one of the girls, who was ill, had learned. I took the music, and sang it right to the end without a fault, and with so clear and bell-like a voice, that most of those present literally opened their eyes and mouths as wide as they could. Appetite comes with eating, we are told. When I had finished, I was exceedingly vexed that there were not at least ten verses more. I looked round. My mother was smiling through her tears. My little girlish, heart swelled high. I recollect the humiliations to which I had been subjected, and I resolved to take a brilliant revenge. Stepping forward, and casting one look more at my mother to gain courage, I begged the Examiner to let me sing something else. He consented, and I chose the "Ave Maria," a simple, but indescribably touching composition, which I can never sing, even now without the tears coming into my eyes. I sang it—but how? I do not know. All I recollect is that, when I had finished, I felt the breath from a pair of lips, and warm drops on my forehead. It was the Examiner. "My dear, you have sung like a little angel."

Is now treating successfully Consumption, Brouchitis, and all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, with his COMPOUND MEDICATED INHALATIONS, CONCENTRATED FOOD, AND COUGH SYRUP. During the past ten years Dr. Carpenter has treated and cured thousands of cases of the above named diseases, and has now in his possession certificates of cures from every part of the country. The Inhalation is breathed directly into the lungs, soothing and healing, over all inflamed surfaces, entering into the blood, it imparts vitality as it permeates to every part of the system. The sensation is most pleasant, and the first inhalation often gives very decided relief, particularly when there is much difficulty of breathing. Under the influence of my remedies, the cough soon grows easier, the night sweats cease, the hectic flush vanishes, and with improving digestion the patient rapidly gains strength, and health is again within his grasp.

The Concentrated Food rapidly builds up the most debilitated patient, presenting to the stomach food, all ready to be assimilated and made into good, rich, healthy blood. The Cough Syrup is to be taken at night to alleviate the cough and enable the patient to obtain sleep. Full directions accompany each one of my remedies, which consist of One L. Aler; One Bottle of Alterative Inhalant; One Bottle of Soothing Ferbrigue Inhalant; One Bottle of Anti-Hemorrhagic Inhalant; One Bottle of Concentrated Food; One Bottle of Cough Syrup.
