The editors and publishers of newspapers in Maine met the other day at Augusta, whereupon the Portland Press ventures to affirm that there was gathered "the very wisest and most virtuous little crowd of men in the seediest of last year's clothes that ever met at the State capital."

It is said that if Maud Muller had her life to live over again, and should meet the judge in this year of grace, 1873, she would sue him for breach of promise and obtain sufficient damages to make her family happy, or else shoot him, become a lecturer, and die rich and respectable.
