The Washington Republican says "the democratic papers have wonderfully short memories. This infirmity is particularly illustrated in the case of the Congressional back pay. The whole blame of the passage of that measure is laid upon the Republican majority, when the fact is it could not have passed without the assistance and votes of the democracy. The record stands thus:-In the House 51 Republicans voted for it and 60 against—a majority of nine against the increase. The democratic vote stood 48 in favor of its passage and 37 against it-a majority 11 in favor of its passage and 37 against it—a majority of 11 in favor of the back pay, in the Senate 23 Republican Senators voted for it and 22 against, while 13 democrats voted for and only 5 against. Taking the aggregage of both houses, we find that 82 Republicans voted against the passage of the bill and 74 in its favor, giving a Republscan majority of 8 against it. The democrats who voted against it were 61, and those in favor 42 -a democratic majority of 19 in favor of the "grab." In a word, the case stands thus: A majority of the Republicans in the two houses voted against the bill, while a majority of the democrats voted in favor of its passage.

PROFESSOR WISE's contemplated balfor the 20th August. There will be seats for eight or ten passengers. Perhaps the longest aerial voyage on record was made by Holland, Mason and Green from London in 1836, in a baloon about sixty feet high and fifty feet in diameter, containing 85,000 cubic feet. It was furnished with provisions for a fortnight, with instruments of great variety, and clothing in abundance. It crossed the channel, passed over many villages and towns in France, and, after many attempts, found a resting place in the Duchy of Nassau, five hundred miles from London, the distance being accomplished in eighteen hours. It must be remembered that the movement of balloons depends entirely on the currents of air, and is quite independent of any power that can be applied to them from within, and that the voyager has not the power to select any place for his landing.

Sunstroke.

Although sunstroke or coup de soliels is rather a rare thing in this city, it is well that every one should know exactly what to do in case one should be flirtation on the part of a certain "Benstruck. On this subject Dr. Woods, writing for Lippincott's Magazine says. Sweating is nature's great refrigerative measure, and to keep this up large quantities of water should be drank, not too cold, but without stint-quarte, if the thirst crave it. Keep sweating, and probably you are not in any immediate danger, but when, on a July or August day, a man's head begins to throb and the suface grows dry and hot, while unwonted restlessness and lassitude come on, as he values his life let him leave his work, however imperative, and take at once a cold bath. There should in this disease be no waiting for the doctor. The remedy is so simple, the death so imminent, that the good Samaritan passing by should save his brother. The good Samaritan must, however have a cool head to be useful. Not every man that falls unconscious on a hot day has sunstroke. There is fortunately one criterion so easily of application that any one can use it. Go at once to the fallen man, open his shirt bosom, and lay the band upon his chest: if the skin is cool you may rest assured that, whatever may be the trouble, it is not sunstroke. If, on the contrary, the lost. The patient must be carried to the nearest pump or hydrant, stripped to his waist, and bucketful after buckettul of cold water be dashed over him until consciousness begins to return or the intense heat of the surface decidedly abates.

THE Kinston Gazette says: There is a young pigeon at Mrs John Parrott's, which is just beginning to fly, and which has voluntarily taken up its abode with an old cat and kittens, and on such friendly terms that if the pigeon makes any unusual noise the cats will run to its relief.

The Eccentricities of the great metropolis are varied enough to be turned, daily, into a thrilling romance of the average number of chapters and more than the average brilliancy of the finis. The other day, New York journals published-without comments, so accustomed are they to the article—a story where a young girl, drugged with wine, was unconsciously to herself married to a man. It was not a pretty ending, because the young lady was indignant and declared that she was not married at all. It was a true story, however, and went for what it was worth. Only Sunday last there was a second case of mock marriage—this time of a young girl who had been the recipient of much edict." Being, on that day, in "Bene-dict's" saloon,-he keeps a house of that character-a bystander, professing to be a clergyman, celebrated solemnly a contract of marriage between them. "Benedict" declares that marriage was all a joke. "Beatrice" affirms that it is genuine, and has the blessing of the church upon it. The young lady in this case does not run from the ceremony, but has already taken her place bebind the counter and has begun to act the part of a good wife to her "husband." Here are two cases-one of a girl married against her will, and one of a girl married in spite of her "husband's" will. Both come from New York city. Who can say, after this, that New York is not a metropolis and cosmopolitan, at that?

This is the way a worn-out editor announces his freedom from newspaper thraldom for one day:

Fly away to the mountains, beneath shade and by fountains, all ye dustchoked patriots fly; there you may keep still, orate if you will, or sing of the Fourth of July. If you orate, please skin be burning hot, the case is certain | state that the country is great-a patent ly sunstroke, and no time should be right Yankee notion; talk of railroads and rings, and other big things, not omitting the fact that an ocean is all that keeps it from crossing over, and bossing all the nations that in darkness lie, who in ignorance are groping, without the semblance of hoping for a day like the Fourth of July. You will sling in Adams and Hancock, Washington and Plymouth Rock, Yorktown and Well, 8 Weller and 1 Twogood. Then New Orleans, Paul Jones and his ship.
