

The Evening Post.

WILMINGTON, N. C. Thursday, October 2d, 1873.

The New York Daily Graphic is not now the only illustrated daily in the world.

We hope our friends Stone et al. won't go up in a balloon, and cut off most of his North Carolina exchanges right after it.

THE concourse of pilgrims to Paray le Monial, in France, proves that the credulity of mankind has not perceptibly diminished since the days of the Crusades.

A Recent Importation from Scotland.

Dr. McCosh, of Princeton College, has conjured a spirit which, it seems, he cannot easily lay. At a recent Educational Convention at Elmira, he suggested the propriety of the National Government doing something to diffuse knowledge among the blacks.

The Panic Over—A Great Victory Gained.

The panic is over, and one of the greatest triumphs known in financial history has been gained. The reopening of the Stock Exchange yesterday marked the end of an eventful flurry, and gave us assurance of the completeness of the victory achieved by men in legitimate business over the rash and heedless speculators in Wall street.

Singer's New Family Sewing Machine.

THE SUPERIORITY OF THE SINGER SEWING MACHINE for beauties of stitch, simplicity of mechanism, and adaptability to every class of sewing, has been established in fair and open competition in actual sewing contests, and the PUBLIC RECOGNITION of their merits is to be found in the numerous awards of FIRST PRIZES over every competitor at the VIENNA EXPOSITION and nearly all the Industrial Fairs in America and in Europe.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

The quarrel between Jay Gould and Bischoffheim, growing out of the sale of fifteen thousand shares of the Erie railway stock, was amicably adjusted by their respective representatives on Monday evening, and a heavy litigation about to be begun by the latter stopped.

Political affairs in Panama continue in a disturbed and uncertain condition. Some three hundred men are kept under arms in consequence of a large number of rebels against the existence of the government being in the woods near the city, which they threaten to come in and attack.

A visit to the different savings banks in New York, October 1st, shows that all fears on the part of depositors have vanished, and that large numbers who drew out money last week have returned it. There are about $13,000,000 in greenbacks in the vaults, which, when all signs of any run are passed, will be distributed through other channels.

The financial situation in Chicago, October 1st, presented a much brighter aspect than the day before. Receipts of currency continue large, some $3,000,000 being reported; while demands upon deposits are falling off. In fact, some banks have begun to furnish their customers with the usual accommodations. The prospect is that it will not be long before business will resume its wonted channels.

A board of officers, consisting of Gen. Gilmore, Love and Lorain, and Colonels Treadwell and Bennett, of the ordnance corps, have assembled at Fortress Monroe to test the Gatling gun in comparison with the eight-inch howitzer loaded with canister. The howitzer is loaded and fired a given number of times, and the effect on the target noted, also the time consumed in loading and firing. The Gatling gun is then given the same time, and its effect noted and compared. Mr. Gatling is superintending in person the firing of his gun. The result is not yet known.

From letters received in New York from Dundee, Scotland, from the Polaris survivors, published in the Republican, we glean the following vivid description of their rescue: "The captain of the Ravenseraig, which rescued the party, says when they were first discovered they were thirteen or fourteen miles distant, making their way over pack ice to their ship. Eighteen picked men were sent to their assistance, and it took the entire party seven hours to make their way back to his vessel. This arose from the soft and slushy state of the deep snow covering the ice, while myriads of huge hummocks were piled and heaped everywhere over the surface, which was also much split and full of treacherous holes, into which many a flounder took place. The party were delighted to hear from us of the safety of their comrades. They never expected to hear from them more, and were much surprised at their miraculous escape from what appeared a lingering if not a speedy death. It was doubtless, also, a truly providential circumstance that placed the Ravenseraig in a position to pick this party of castaways up. Had such not happened, it is highly probable that none of them would have ever reached the Danish settlements, when we consider their resources as regards food, the state of their boats and the impracticability of traveling on foot a distance of at least three hundred miles over such treacherous ice as then covered the expanse of Melville bay. Only six weeks' provisions were left. Although divided with the utmost economy, and even with plenty of ammunition and arms, sufficient food could not, in all probability, have been obtained to support fourteen men during so long a march. Bears, seals and birds are scarcely to be got at. The boats of the Polaris crew both got stove as soon as they got entangled in the Melville pack ice. The first portion of their voyage had been performed in open water for the most part, so that their greater difficulties were only begun when we sighted them. Moreover, the rest of the journey must have been attempted without shelter of any kind. In fact, they were totally unprepared, both as regards boats and clothing, for such an arduous undertaking.
