We have given up the whole of our paper to-day to a complete List of the Acts passed at the last session of congress, arranged alphabetically under their appropriate heads. It would be wrong in us to take to ourselves, even tacitly, the credit of this lucid arrangement and useful compilation. We and our readers are indebted for it to the attentiveness and intelligence of J B. Colvin, esq. of the department of state. This list presents at one view a synopsis of all the legislation of congress at the late session, and must be appreciated by every class of readers far beyond the value ordinarily attached to a single newspaper.
