Rural Economy.

AMERICAN FARMERS,

Yours is among the choicest of callings, and not so great a body of people in any other part of the globe has such ample means of independence and comfort. Of the ground you till, yourselves are the lords. Every goodly tree you plant, every acre of ground you meliorate, tends directly to your own benefit and that of your wives and children. "Be up and doing." Think not hard concerning your work, and the toil of your hands "because of the ground which the Lord hath cursed." To the industrious it is a blessing in disguise. Say not "a little more folding of the hands to sleep" if thorns and thistles are still growing in your enclosures. Expel them from with all speed, every nuisance, every deformity occasioned by the wiles of the serpent. Destroy the teeth of the old dragon wherever you find them scattered within your premises. Make every acre of your ground turn to some account. To industry add still. Seek earnestly, and by all means in your power to increase your knowledge in practical agriculture. To skilful industry, add economy.—Be frugal; let your living be good, but plain and uncostly; so you will avoid the curse of debt, which is not remediable like that brought upon the ground. Dash from your lips the cup of intemperance; its deadly poison is more to be dreaded than the venomous tooth of the Adder that hisses under your sheaves. Bring up your children in the habits of industry and frugality; and in the fear of the Lord. Grudge not to school and educate them well, that they may become intelligent, virtuous, useful, respectable men and women. In all your toils and labours, in all your domestic concerns seek the guidance of that wisdom which is from above, and the blessings of heaven will rest upon you.

Looking through the vista of a few years, methinks I see in prospective the auspicious period when the United States shall possess an agricultural population far superior in numbers and equal in knowledge and virtue, to any the world has ever known; when millions and millions of tillers of the ground, shall be spread over this vast territory, enjoying the comforts of moderate independence, the lamp of divine truth, the lights of science, social and domestic happiness, and distinguished no less for the moral and christian virtues, than for the pre-eminent goodness of their secular lot and portion.

Albany Plough Boy.

PEACH TREES.

The cultivation of this tree has become very interesting to gardeners in the vicinity of this city. A very simple mode of preserving and restoring them when apparently nearly destroyed by the disease so fatal to them in this quarter, and commonly called the "Yellows," has been accidentally discovered by a gentleman in this city. A statement of the fact, as it occurred, will convey all necessary information.—In the fall of 1818, a very fine tree, standing in his yard, was apparently dead from the effects of the above mentioned disease. Throughout the fall and winter, very large quantities of common wood ashes were casually thrown by the servants about the root of the tree. To the astonishment of all who had seen it the preceding fall, it put forth its leaves vigorously the next season, and bore abundance of fine fruit. A small quantity of wood ashes was again thrown round its roots last fall, and the tree is now so full of fine fruit that it has become necessary to prop it up. This is a very simple remedy, and certainly worthy of trial.

STRIPED GRASS.

This grass is cultivated in gardens as an ornament, its variegated stripes of colour being considered as giving it a very beautiful appearance. No means, so far as we know, have ever been taken by the agriculturist to cultivate it in the field; indeed, it is generally supposed that cattle will not feed upon it, and that it affords little or no nourishment. This is a mistaken notion, and which is entirely done away by a fact which has come within our own observation. Mr. Woodward, living in Plainfield, in the eastern part of this state, transplanted into his garden, several years since, a root of this grass; here it remained and grew for several seasons, until the son of the old gentleman, becoming tired of having it in the way, pulled it up, and carrying it to the head of a large meadow which belonged to his father, threw it into the brook which nearly equally divides the meadows, supposing that the water would kill it; but here it took
