WOOL CARDED.

SAMUEL S. CLAYTON & Co., six miles below Hillsborough, at the old tilt hammer on Eno, have their machine for carding wool in good order, and will card for ten cents a pound, and break for hatters at six and a quarter cents.

Those who intend to have their wool carded, must pick it open and twist off with their fingers every tag or curl, and clean out all the trash. The sooner it is brought to be picked, the better it can be done. If it lies long the wax gets hard and gummy, and injures the staple, and in cold weather it is very difficult to do good work.

CASH given for FLAX SEED, delivered at the mill, or at the store of J. P. Sneed & Co. in Hillsborough.

FOR SALE,
Oil, Hoes, Axes, Plows, &c.
Wagons and Carryalls.

They will have in operation by the middle of October next, a first rate

COTTON GIN,
and will give a run for Cotton.

STRAYED,

From the subscriber, on the 24th instant, a likely Filly, about fifteen months old, of a roanish colour, has a small white spot on her forehead, and had on when she went away a small bell. I expect she has followed some waggon. Any information of said filly will be thankfully received by me, by letter or otherwise, the letter directed to Col. H. Sims, or to the widow Dillard's. A liberal reward will be given for her delivery to me, in the lower part of Orange county, near the road leading from Hillsborough to Raleigh.

MR. GALLATIN'S ADDRESS TO GEN. LA FAYETTE.

General La Fayette having traversed the southern and western states, and having been every where received with the liveliest demonstrations of joy and gratitude, arrived at Fayette county, in Pennsylvania, on the 26th ultimo, and after spending a day at the seat of the venerable Albert Gallatin, returned to Union on the 28th, and on the 29th proceeded to Pittsburgh.

The following is a copy of the address delivered to Gen. La Fayette, on behalf of the people, on his arrival at Union, by Mr. Gallatin. Though lengthy, it will well repay a perusal.

GENERAL LAFAYETTE:—The citizens of this county would wish to express their joy on seeing you amongst them, their feelings of love and gratitude towards you. These sentiments you have already heard in a thousand places, and from a thousand voices: and what language so eloquent as those multitudes collected from every quarter to meet you—as those acclamations which greet you wherever you appear! Accept these demonstrations as the sincere and spontaneous effusions of a free people impressed with respect for your character, and who entertain the most grateful sense of your services.

Of these services it is hardly necessary to speak; they are engraved on the heart of every American. Who amongst them, has forgotten that Gen. La Fayette, in the prime of youth, risked his life for the sake of America, all the advantages of birth and rank, the splendor of a brilliant court, and what was far more precious to him, the endearments of domestic happiness, of conjugal love? Who does not remember that he came to aid America at the most critical period of her struggle for independence? that he fought and bled for her? that he acquired the friendship and confidence of Washington, the love of all those who fought with him or approached him? that he prepared, that he shared in, the decisive triumph of Yorktown? His services were not confined to the field. Whilst he bore the fatigues and braved the dangers of every campaign, almost every winter he crossed the ocean to stimulate and encourage our friends, to hasten to obtain new succours from our illustrious and unfortunate ally. All these services he rendered with the most perfect disinterestedness, impairing his private fortune, instead of receiving a compensation from the United States.

The name which this county bears, an early evidence of public gratitude, that name, whilst it perpetually reminds us of your virtues and of your services, has also given us a more than common interest in all your fortunes. Let this be our apology for detaining you, even at the risk of wounding your modesty, a few minutes longer than usual on occasions like this.

In the first assembly of Notables it was on your motion that the report of one of its bureaux recommended the restoration of the protestants of France to their civil rights, a report on which was founded the decree so that effect, issued the year before the commencement of the French revolution.

When this last event took place, although belonging to a distinguished family of the privileged class, you instantaneously appeared as one of the most zealous and ablest defenders of the people. The part you took on all the momentous questions agitated at that time, is known to the world. But it has, perhaps, been a common error to believe that France has reaped no other fruits from her revolution that wretchedness and bloodshed, that no material benefits had ultimately accrued to the nation from that portentous event. If, however, the magnitude of the obstacles to be overcome in every quarter, shall be duly considered, and if we compare what France was at the epoch of our revolution, with what it now is, there will be found less cause of astonishment that no more was effected, than of regret that it should have been purchased at so dear a price.

A penal code, imperfect in its forms, but in its penalties as mild as our own, substituted to the sanguinary enactments of a barbarous age; an uniform civil code, adapted to the present state of society, taking the place of superannuated and contradictory usages; trial by jury in criminal, a public trial in all cases; the principles of a representative government adopted, and public moneys annually voted and accounted for; personal liberty rendered more secure, that of the press enlarged, that of conscience established; all the privileges of individuals, of classes, of corporations, of provinces, abrogated; servitude and feudalty entirely abolished, and a people of vassals become a nation of freeholders.—All these together form a mass of improvements, a radical change in the internal policy of France, far greater than ever had been effected, within the same time, in any age or in any country. For almost if not all those advantages were obtained in the course of the three first years of the French revolution, of that short period during which alone you had an influence, and a most powerful influence, over the affairs of France.

No, Sir, you have not lived in vain any more for France than for America. The foundation is laid, and the life of nations is not to be computed by years, but by generations. It does not belong to us to say what further improvements may still be wanted!—what are suitable to the state of France. We can only pray that whatever they may be, they should flow from persuasion, and not be due to force; that they may be the result of mutual confidence restored, and not of new convulsions, of renewed sanguinary conflicts.

I did not depend on you that such should have been the early the immediate termination of the French revolution. Taught, permit me the expression, taught at the school of national liberty, under the illustrious founders of this republic, you were not a more energetic defender of the cause of liberty on the floor of the national assembly of France, than conspicuous, as commander-in-chief of her national guards, in preserving order, checking excesses, in preventing crimes, in averting the effusion of blood. You were ever the refuge, often the protector of innocence and misfortune. And where your efforts failed, it was because the task was beyond the powers of man to perform.

When the constitution, which you and your enlightened colleagues had thought best calculated to secure the liberties and to promote the welfare of France; when that constitution which you had sworn to support, in vain threatened from abroad, was assailed from within by an infuriated band; with a prophetic spirit you foresaw the impending rain. Faithful to your oaths, faithful to the people, regardless of forms, careless of personal consequences, you threw yourself in the breach; and on that memorable occasion, to the cause of the people you sacrificed your own popularity—you to whom the approbation and the love of the people were the only worldly rewards, which you ever deemed worthy of any consideration.

The sequel is well known. For having attempted to save the country, you were persecuted, proscribed, despoiled of the inheritance of our fathers, as if you had been an enemy to the country. You did not expect to receive abroad the reward of your services in the cause of liberty and of France.—But, in a foreign land, the proscribed patriot found no asylum but a dungeon. Immured for years, fetters might bind your limbs; your mind remained unconquered, unbroken and free.

Your proscription was the signal for the woes that awaited your devoted country. I will not dwell on the deplorable scenes that ensued. Liberty fled from a land polluted by crimes committed in her sacred name; for, if that first of blessings must be conquered by courage, virtue and wisdom can alone preserve it. When, after a lapse of years, you were restored to France, you found her in the hands of that extraordinary man, who had been designed to rule for a while her destinies and those of Europe. France was immersed in a sea of glory; she was no longer free. You rejoiced in the successes obtained over foreign enemies; you admired all that was great; you approved all that was good. But the honors, the dignities, the splendor, the glories of the new government you sternly refused to share: The right of suffrage was limited to a few electors designated by the executive; the legislature was cumb, personal liberty insecure, that of the press annihilated, all the powers were centered in one man. You withdrew into honorable retirement, where, surrounded by a beloved family, you were for near fourteen years a pattern of every domestic, as you had been a model of every civic virtue. The bubbles of ambition never were the object of your pursuit; and in the simplicity of your heart, you did not even think that you made a sacrifice; but there still remained one to be made to your principles.

Your only son, the worthy inheritor of your name and of your virtues, he whom we rejoice to see by your side, he was fighting under the banners of the emperor; they were those of France. He could not but follow your steps; he distinguished himself in a remarkable manner. A rapid promotion seemed to await him, a career of honors and glory to be opened to him. He bore your name; that career at once stopped; those brilliant prospects were shut up—and for life. And that last sacrifice was made by him and you, by you, the tenderest of fathers, rather than to give the powerful sanction of your name to a

NOTICE.

WHEREAS the practice of electioneering is likely to vitiate the morals of the community, and has a tendency to disseminate vice throughout every section of the state, by incensuring the people, lying, slandering, and speaking, false representations, and in a word, by all manner of wickedness, which practice is likely to drive out of the service of the state all our best citizens, and moral worth, and deprive the state of the services of its most valuable and intelligent men; I, therefore, request the punctual attendance of all the freemen of Guilford county, especially the members of the Presbyterian, Quaker, Methodist, and Baptist churches, to meet at Greensborough on the fourth day of July next, to form and enter upon some plan by which this Hydra monster of iniquity may be put to death.

Houses and Lots For Sale in Hillsborough.

THE subscriber offers for sale her houses and lots on King Street, about one hundred yards west of the market house in Hillsborough. The lots are well improved, and contain comfortable dwelling and other necessary out-houses, are adjoining each other, and contain an half acre each. There is also a well, affording excellent water at all seasons of the year. A credit of one, two and three years, will be given, and, if the purchaser wishes, a negro girl will be taken in part payment. The lots will be sold together or separately, to suit the convenience of purchasers. Persons wishing to purchase town property are invited to view the premises, as they will doubtless be pleased with their situation. Any persons desirous of purchasing the above named houses and lots will apply to Thomas H. Lane, Esq. of Hillsborough, or to the subscriber living near the Cross Road meeting house, in Orange county.
