PROST BOTTS OF THE Hillsborough Recorder, ENLARGED.

TO THE PUBLIC.

After some unexpected delays, we have this week been enabled to present the Recorder to its readers upon an enlarged sheet. This has emphatically been called the age of improvement; but in all the multiplied forms in which this spirit has manifested itself during the last twenty years, perhaps in none is it more perceptible than in the appearance of the public press. The newspapers of our villages now, surpass in size and neatness those formerly issued from our largest cities. It has long been our desire that the Recorder should reflect a portion of this spirit of the age: and an effort to accomplish this desire, we felt was due to that tended to. portion of our friends who have continued to sustain us through good and through evil report. This enlargement of our sheet necessarily involves a considerable additional expense; but we are mistaken in the people of Orange, if we may not safely throw ourselves upon their generosity, and with confidence hope that they will duly appreciate the benefits of a free and honest press, and extend to it such a portion of patronage as will, in some degree at least, compensate the care and toil and expense necessary to sustain it.

It is now more than eighteen years since we commenced our establishment at this place, during which time we have had many difficulties to encounter. The storms of political strife engender many prejudices which it is sometimes vain to attempt to allay; and the zeal of popular enthusiasm creates preferences which yield nothing to honesty of purpose. These things tend greatly to depress a village newspaper, the prosperity of which depends almost solely on the patronage of the county in which it is published; and we ought not, perhaps, to expect entirely to escape their influence. But we have had more potent adversaries than these. It is said of the church of Rome, that she withholds the Bible from the common people, that they may not, through ignorance of the true meaning, be led into heresies; the priests only are to read and interpret for them. So it is with some of our self-styled Republicans: they are afraid to trust the people, and if it was in their power, they would entirely prohibit the circulation of all papers which do not perfectly square with their notions. Not able to contend openly for their doctrines, they would suppress all inquiry. And this is the spirit which has been operating for several years to undermine the circulation of the Recorder, and if possible to break up the establishment. At one time this was very nigh being accomplished; we were reduced almost to the last extremity; the star of our hope had sunk almost to the very horizon. But amid all this darkness, we were sustained by a consciousness of the integrity of our purpose and

LOVE AFFAIR.

The New York Whig gives a romantic account of a love affair between a member of the New York Legislature and the chambermaid of the hotel where he boarded. She was twenty-two years of age, beautiful and aminble. The legislator was smitten at first sight, and proposed to accompany her to the theatre. She stated the case to the landlord, who advised her to accept the invitation; which she did. At the theatre, the worthy legislator proposed matrimony. The maid refused; giving excellent reasons. She said, his daughters were educated, she was not: she was poor, he was wealcule of his friends, and his wife had not pring long more and tail, with leather collar been deal a year. A few days after he backled round his neck. Valued at forty do again proposed, and was again refused. lars. Widowers are persevering fellows, and a third time the member was at her feet. He could not resist her unassuming grace and soft allorements. He now offered to furnish her with every thing she might require; but he was again dismissed, or rather she told thin to consult his fiends. He did so-be consulted many of his brother members-stated his wretched condition, and was advised to leave Alhany immediately. Notwithstanding all this, he returned to the fair chambermaid -she reluctantly consented, merely to preserve his senses and they were to have been married on Thursday night last.

"I WISH I WAS A PIG." Among the dry, quiet and philosophical scenes with which Mr. Neal's recent volume of " Charcoal Sketches" abounds, we think this soliloquy of a loafer, who had been sleigh-riding and got " spilt," is inimitable.
