

JOSH BILLINGS ON LUNCH PINS.

I want to bet three dollars that no man ever matched himself agin the devil, but what he got best.

And I want to bet one dollar and seventy-five cents more that there iz no villin on airth so gretely mean as he who recommends a vice that he has too much prudence to indulge in himself.

I have held that if a man is virtuous, he can't be ignorant, and I still hold it.

Aimh, if you strike low. The man who undertakes tew jump three hundred and seventy-five feet ahead, will certainly make a good try.

I never knu a man who was alwus anxious tew repent of his sins before he had committed them, who didn't want the sharpest kind us watching.

"Don't put nuph tili too narrow what can be did to-day." It is better even to do a foolish thing at onst, if you have posityfly made up yure mind to do it.

I never bet enny stamps on the man who iz always telling what he would have did if he had been there. I have noticed that this kind never git there.

Faith dun't app-ar to me tew be ennything more than tip top good sense; and the faith that iz in this world now won't keep a man from falling to the bottom of a well if he lets go o' the curb to spet in his hands.

When I git to not having any good luck, it doz seem to me that I can have more of it than enny man f ever knu, and not ball try; I suppose it seems jist so to you, my friend, don't it?

I kant think of enny talent now, that iz so apt to descend from father to son, untarnished, as the gift of exsgeration.

"There aint cony thing nu under the sun." The old feller in Konneckticut, who carried the same old jack knife for forty-three years, and wore out nine nu handles and twelve sets of blades, sez so.

There aint, after all, but one right way to dew things. I hav seen kows that you could milk on both sides, but they wa'n't more than half broke.

A man may hav a perfect right to be born single, but I doubt whether he has a right tew continy on so.

I take it, that the excellence of human natur consists in lifting the greatest amount of sorrow with the least amount of grin.

The Memphis Aval-ncine says it is impossible to exaggerate the horrors of the sufferings occasioned by the overflow of the Mississippi. It has received, the most terrible descriptions of men, women and children, cattle, horses and swine, heaped together in one indiscriminate pile with drift wood, fences and trash by the merciless waters. The inhabitants who escaped are scattered in every direction, homeless and penniless. Many, however, who were surrounded by water and cut off from help have died the most lingering and agonizing of deaths. The horrors of the worst scenes of the war have been outstripped by this wide-spread and indescribable calamity.

There is a dog in Edinburg which for eight and a half years has kept nightly watch over the grave of his master in the Old Greyfriars' Churchyard. All endeavors to induce him to relinquish his vigils have been unavailing, even in the most inclement weather. He roams about by day and is fed by people who have become interested in his remarkable fidelity.

A terrible accident happened at St. Louis, on Monday, which resulted in the death of a young lady named Brideman. Miss B. had in sport thrown a book at a young man named Blanke, who, having a shot gun in his hand which he supposed was not loaded, playfully pointed it at her. To his surprise the gun was discharged, lodging the whole charge of shot in her face and producing death in a few moments.

A wedding in Chicago was frustrated the other day by the non-arrival of the bridegroom, who mysteriously disappeared, and left his bride to be carried home a raving maniac.

The New York Evening Gazette says: Mr. A. T. Stewart has sent in the plans of his new store to the Superintendent of Buildings. It is estimated that the alterations will cost $2,500,000. His house on Fifth Avenue is to cost $1,500,000. Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars are to be spent upon its internal fittings.

San Francisco, May 14.—It is reported that a company of United States troops have been defeated by the Indians and forty killed, in Arizona, and a train of seventy mules, loaded with goods, captured.

The entire ceiling of a church in Augusta, Georgia, fell Sunday evening, but a short time before the hour appointed for the evening service. Fortunately, the congregation had not assembled.

A dispatch from Texas received by the President says that by reason of General Griffin's order requiring exclusion of jurors who cannot take the test oath, the courts are closed. The question is asked: "Is this ruling approved by the President?" No answer, it is said, will be given until the Attorney General's opinion shall be completed.
