MEETINGS APPOINTED.

Don't forget that the Hon. Joseph J. Davis, Democratic candidate for the 4th Congressional District will address the people of Orange in the town of Hillsboro, on Tuesday evening next, October 16th.

Col. W. L. D. Russell, Wilsdeigton and Mr. E. N. Nash, now of New York are at present on a visit to Hillsboro.

Dr. D. A. Robertson, Surgeon Dentist will be in Hillsboro on his regular visitation during Court week, residing here on Monday, Oct. 24th. Those having appointments will please take notice.

C. M. Parks is just back with the fullest, freshest and largest stock of all goods in his line that he has ever had, and is opening and offering the same on unparalleled terms. He can and will suit everybody. See him splendid ad. in these columns.

We are always glad to lay our exchanges open to the use of visitors and they are always welcome to read them in our office. But we cannot consent to distribute them abroad as soon as they arrive, often before we read them. WE HAVE USE FOR THEM, and do not receive them as a matter of public accommodation.

Committee for Negro.

Samuel Patterson, a negro from Durham, was committed to jail by Judge Blackwood, after full examination of the Court House on Saturday on a charge of rape committed on one Mary Green, colored. Wm. Boult and S. H. Webb Esq. appeared for the defendant, and A. W. Graham Esq., for the prosecutor.

Curious Coincidences.

In the successive organization of the Orange Guards, there is a singular coincidence in the succession of the first commander of each stage of its existence. Originally formed, in 1832, the first Captain was the late Col. Caldwell-Jones. Reorganized in 1855, its Captain was Dr. Price Jones, son of Col. Caldwell-Jones; and in the third organization, 1861 Captain was Dr. Price Jones, son of Dr. Price Jones, and Grandson of Col. Caldwell-Jones, thus presenting a succession by a regular line of descent through father, son and grandson.

Henry N. Brown, the Independent Republican candidate for Congress, says his friends all is well with "Cates Baby." Thus his name is in the hands of his party, and that the action of the Mass Meeting of the 1st Oct., will be endorsed by the people Oct. 2nd 1878.

Tobacco Crops, Burning of Tobacco Barns.

We learn that the operations of cutting and curing are going on with great activity. The tobacco is better ripened than usual and the results of curing are considered as more satisfactory than for some years past. From present indications, the proportion of inferior tobacco will be very much smaller than last year.

While curing is going on, we fear of more than the usual number of barn burns, by defective flues, most probably. Mr. W. H. Anderson of this county lost one on Wednesday evening last, filled with very superior tobacco. Mr. Moses Anderson, Mr. Pittard David Terrell and Jas. Umsted, also of this county, each lost a barn, as did also Mr. Charles Crisp and Mr. William Corbett, both of the county of Caswell, not far from the Orange line.

Dr. T. B. Bull, Mineral Wells, is the proponent of the law. Rev. Dr. J. W. Bell, of Baltimore, and we think one of the best compounds offered to suffering humanity.

Mr. T. B. Bell brought to our office last week bladders of his dogwood, never expanded, which is a treat we have never seen. The dogwood like the ribs of a violin, prepares its bladders for the strings and the bows of both may be found during the winter, apparently just ready to burst. But we have never known either of them to anticipate their regular period of expansion.

Orange Presbytery.

The Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald of this place and Mr. Joe. Woods of Little River left on Wednesday morning last to represent their respective Churches in the semi-annual session of Orange Presbytery held this year at Haywood, in Chatham County.

All that have organized to pronounce Dr. Bell's Baby Syrup the best medicine for the complaints of early childhood, 50 cents per bottle.

A Pleasant Evening.

For the first time in many months we attended the monthly Reception at the School of the Misses Nash and Miss Kirk on Friday Evening last. These are always of an eminently social character, attracting to them those that are fond of music, those who are interested in the School, and those who enjoy the pleasures of society, and they afford at the same time opportunity for the young ladies to exhibit their progress in musical education free from the formalities of public exhibition and with all the unreverence of familiar freedom.

These receptions are always pleasant to us,—none more so than this last; for the music was most excellent and the company most congenial. On an occasion like this, we refrain from special comment. We will only remark upon the steady and substantial progress made by the pupils under the present instructor, Mr. J. A. Anne. He himself is a distinguished, a perfect performer, and as most thoroughly reader. He is laboriously instructed, and watchful over every note struck by his organ. He permits no error to be passed by, but exacts the most patient repetition until perfection is attained in time, in tone, and in expression; and under his system his pupils unavoidably become good musicians whether as vocalists or as performers.

In all other respects, we find the School such as we have always regarded it—full and thorough in its course of instruction, almost painfully solicitous for the well-being of its pupils, kind and considerate to a degree that almost conceals the idea of school life. We met an old pupil (old only in one sense) who seemed to express as much delight at being again amid the scenes of her former life as if she had returned home after years of absence. And this we find to be the universal sentiment, one which speaks volumes for the School.

Miss S. K. Nash, one of the excellent principals of the School is slowly recovering from the painful injury sustained some weeks since.

CELEBRATION OF THE ORANGE GUARDS.

On Tuesday afternoon last, Oct. the first, the Guards commemorated their first anniversary under the new organization by a parade, in which, fuller ranks than usual gave more imposing exhibition to their fine drill and beautiful uniform than had been the pleasure of our citizens often to witness. At 3 o'clock the Company entered the Court House, where a considerable concourse of ladies and gentlemen had already assembled, to hear the address of Capt. James A. Graham, at one time a commander of the old Guards. This address was of a half hour's duration, and was listened to with intense interest.

It was exceedingly graceful in delivery, frequently eloquent and touching in language, but more impressive because it appealed to so many sympathetic feelings, at times arousing the sentiment of pride by recalling the gallant deeds of the men of Hillsboro in the many battle fields of the late war; again, touching the tender chords of sorrow by recalling to memory the sad but glorious fate of those whose destiny it was to lay down their lives in defense of the loved ones at home.

Capt. Graham gave a full and animated sketch of the Company, beginning with the first struggles for life six years ago as the year 1861 when it blomed into a bright but brief existence, rising again in 1855, and gaining in vigor and hardening its muscles for the real duties to which it was called in 1861.

The Orange Guards were reorganized in 1865, with Price Jones as Captain, John H. Webb 1st Lt. David Phillips 2nd do, Henry Richards 3rd do, W. J. Freeland 1st Sergeant, J. D. Wilson 2nd do, J. C. Webb 3rd do, Albert Paul 4th do, Wm. Sandwick, Surgeon, and Stephen Nichols, Instructor in tactics, with John M. Wolff and Paisley Tate, as Musicians and 33 privates. It flourished as a holiday Company, until the breaking out of hostilities in 1861, when it tendered its services to the Governor of North Carolina; and they were accepted. On the 17th day of April of that year, Capt. Jones received orders to report to the fort below Wilmington with his command, and on the 29th, the Company embarked on the train for their destination. The officers then attached to it were Price Jones, Captain, Jas. A. Graham, 3rd Sgt., Wm. A. Hayes, Abraham Hedges, Sam'l. Nelson, Wm. H. Nunn, David C. Park, Eli Sharp, Joseph A. Smith, Sidney G. Strayhorn, John F. Thompson, Gulon W. Waddell, Thomas F. Ward, S. King Woods, W. Duke Woods.

All of the foregoing are now living except those who died at Kinston in the summer of 1862.

The first meeting of the Metropolitan Works took place on the 1st of October, 1878, at the Metropolitan Works, 10th and Franklin Streets, and the second meeting on the 1st of November, 1878, at the same place.

Many plotters to Richmond have had their attention directed to the immense mass of buildings on Canal street, and extending from 8th Street, and occupying nearly the whole block, from whose recesses come the ceaseless din of work and clangor of machinery, and from whose tall chimneys ascend the ceaseless volume of smoke and dust, and the ceaseless work below. There are the famous Metropolitan Works of W. E. Tanner & Co., the fabricators of the various machinery for the extensive manufacture of the growing agricultural and mechanical wants of Virginia and North Carolina.

The advertisement in this paper will give some idea of the extent and variety of operations, and we invite special attention to the character of work the Metropolitan Works have no superior. Mr. J. W. Hooker of this place is agent for this section, and his well known energy and fine character we hope will find abundant employment in bringing the products of the Metropolitan Works into the market.

October came in with its usual beauty and mildness of temperature. We heard a lady make a very natural wish, that October had sixty two instead of thirty-one days. Life is a luxury while four miles below Newbern on the 14th of March 1862 when it lost 3 men wounded and one captured; and, subsequently falling from Newbern with loss of all its baggage and reached Richmond just too late for the battle of Seven Pines. It was usefully employed but not actively engaged up to the Maryland campaign, in the beginning of which the 27th Regiment aided in the capture of Loudon Heights and Harper's Ferry which fell into their hands with large stores and 11000 prisoners.

At Sharpsburg the 27th Regiment, with whose future fame the Orange Guards henceforth were inseparably identified, had its first real experience of battle. For two hours the Regiment was without ammunition, holding its position, and the fate of the day, at the point of the bayonet. On this field, Orrin A. Watson, Wm. J. Hopkins and Jacob J. Jackson were killed; Tom Carnichael and Geo. W. Woods mortally wounded, and Willie T. Patterson lost a leg, and Jas. Y. Whitted was severely wounded; and also others, making the total casualties out of 2 officers and 29 men who went into the fight, 3 men killed, and 1 officer and 19 men wounded and 1 prisoner. At Fredericksburg the Company lost Milton G. Robson killed and 2 wounded; Col. Cooke had in the meantime been made Brigadier, and Capt. J. C. Webb made Major of the 27th. Lieut. J. Y. Whitted promoted to Captain of Co. G and Lieuts. Dickson and J. A. Graham advanced in rank.

We are not able to fill up the remaining record of the Company's services, and will only refer to one more action, the fatal affair of Bristol Station, where through ignorance or negligence, two North Carolina brigades were precipitated against more than a full corps of the enemy, posted behind a rail-road embankment. The Orange Guards went into the charge with 3 officers and 65 men; in 40 minutes it was scattered to fragments, 17 men being all that was left of it. Three officers and 8 men lay dead or wounded on the field, or carried wounded to the rear, and perhaps a few had fallen into the hands of the enemy. Here Corporal Hugh P. Woods, Privates W. H. Campbell, Jas. A. Gattis, Geo. W. Merritt W. F. Pearson, Jas. S. Shields and Jas. E. Woods were killed outright; Evans Brown lost an arm and Henry Pickett lost one of the wounded, some died, and others survived maimed and suffering for life.

The Company was subsequently engaged in most of the battles of the campaign of 1863 at the Wilderness, Graves' Farm, Spotsylvania Court House, Pale Green Church, Second Cold Harbor, Glendale, Yellow Tavern and Reams' Station; enduring during the war in twenty pitched battles besides many minor affairs.

Among the killed in fields not named above were Roderick C. Davis, at the Wilderness, John F. Wood at Spotsylvania, Alvin Norwood, Jas. H. Hughes, Thomas E. Jones and George Strayhorn at Gary's Farm, E. S. Faust and Sam'l. F. Lockhart at Yellow Tavern, and John S. Roberts at Reams' Station. Some were also mortally wounded. Lt. Thomas J. Strayhorn and Jas. W. G. Morgan, Jas. E. Williams.

During the war, the whole number of men in the Orange Guards was 481. Of these 14 had become officers, 4 had been transferred to other Companies, 20 had been discharged, on account of wounds, 30 had been killed in battle or died of disease, 25 had died of disease and 5 had deserted, these last at the very closing of hostilities marring a fame which the Company had borne unstained for four long and trying years.

We affix the list of men present at the time of the surrender at Appomattox Court House furnished us subsequent to the address, by Capt. Graham; to which ought to be added the name of C. M. Parks, Hospital Steward of the Regiment, though his name was always retained as a member of the Company:

Capt. Jas. A. Graham, 3rd Sgt., Roscoe Richards, 3rd Corp'l. Meredith Adams, and Musicians Sam'l. A. Dickson, Wm. H. Burroughs, Privates John Boggs, William Brown, James N. Faust, William A. Faust, Wm. A. Hayes, Abraham Hedges, Sam'l. Nelson, Wm. H. Nunn, David C. Park, Eli Sharp, Joseph A. Smith, Sidney G. Strayhorn, John F. Thompson, Gulon W. Waddell, Thomas F. Ward, S. King Woods, W. Duke Woods.

All of the foregoing are now living except those who died at Kinston in the summer of 1862.

THE RADICAL POW-WOW.

A meeting called by Henry Brown to appoint delegates to the meeting held in Raleigh on Tuesday last, was the subject of much amendment to those who attended. It was ostensibly called to get an endorsement for Brown, but was met by most active opposition by the friends of Turner, led by Ike Strayhorn. Brown's resolution, proposing the endorsement of the nominee of the Convention, whoever he might be, —Cates' lady, was fondly expected to be the bantling of the Convention—were met by counter resolutions, in the shape of an amendment offered by Ike, approving the Radical Executive Committee enclosing Turner. Both sides were clamorous, and it only needed Turner's cow bell and Bledsoe's whistle to complete the pandemonium. Discussion was wild and furious, and parliamentary proceedings were made light of. Strayhorn moved an adjournment, and though the motion was not put, he left the house followed by the Turner element. Brown and his friends stuck to their seats, and carried the motion to appoint delegates under the Brown set of resolutions. Ike, finding the battle still going on, returned with his forces and re-entered the fray, protesting against further action after the meeting had been declared adjourned, but fighting to the last to have a Turner delegation appointed. We believe this point was never formally settled, and the delegates of both sides went to Raleigh on their own hook.

We are not able to fill up the remaining record of the Company's services, and will only refer to one more action, the fatal affair of Bristol Station, where through ignorance or negligence, two North Carolina brigades were precipitated against more than a full corps of the enemy, posted behind a rail-road embankment. The Orange Guards went into the charge with 3 officers and 65 men; in 40 minutes it was scattered to fragments, 17 men being all that was left of it. Three officers and 8 men lay dead or wounded on the field, or carried wounded to the rear, and perhaps a few had fallen into the hands of the enemy. Here Corporal Hugh P. Woods, Privates W. H. Campbell, Jas. A. Gattis, Geo. W. Merritt W. F. Pearson, Jas. S. Shields and Jas. E. Woods were killed outright; Evans Brown lost an arm and Henry Pickett lost one of the wounded, some died, and others survived maimed and suffering for life.

One of two things in this meeting merit notice. One is the active part taken by Ike Strayhorn, a leading Republican, and the most prominent negro in pushing Turner's cause; the other was the statement made by Strayhorn to the meeting that he had letters in his pocket from Holden, the arch enemy of the Democratic party, the man against whom Turner moved heaven and earth to procure an impeachment, if not against whom Turner has brought suit in every county in the district for false imprisonment, in which Holden says, that while his position (a position Turner, more than any other, was instrumental in putting him in) forbids his taking an active part in politics, yet he very cordially endorses the act of the Executive Committee in making Turner the standard bearer of the Republican party! Is it not divine? Whatever largeness like this? But can Democrats believe that any good is to come to them when Holden and Turner lie down together and sweep the end of the nation to destruction?
