RED SEA PEARL.

The mother of pearl fisheries of the Red Sea extend the whole length of that water. About three hundred boats are employed by the Arab tribes who are engaged in the work—open, undecked boats, of from eight to twenty tons burden, carrying a large luteen sail, manned by crews of from five to twelve men, and each provided with a number of small canoes. There are two fishing seasons during the year, one of four and one of eight months, during nearly the whole of which the boats keep the sea. Fatal accidents are said to be known among the divers, and they are remarkable for their strength and good health. They dive between the ages of ten and forty years, and the practice is said to have no ill effects. Operations are conducted only in calm weather, when the shell can be discovered by the eye at a depth varying between seven and fifteen fathoms. Of late years, empty petroleum tins, with the ends knocked out and a sheet of glass inserted in one end, have been used to assist the eye. The glazed end of the tin is submerged under the sea, when a much clearer and deeper vision is obtained. During the last ten years the fish is said to have diminished, owing to the death of shells, from ten to twenty per cent. in quantity.—New York Star.

GOOD ROADS.

The state of a country's great highways is the indication of its civilization, and in a narrower view of the matter, the state of the public roads of a State, county or community enables one to form a fair idea of its progress and prosperity. Our people are beginning to recognize this fact, and the people of the surrounding country who visit us are manifesting much interest in the matter. They express a willingness to do all in their power to put the roads in good order for fall and winter, realizing the vital importance of offering every convenience to travel during that portion of the year.

QUITE EXULTANT.

Mr. J. C. Cobb and his standing advertisement in the Workman have been received with open arms by the Republican and Third Party friends, the North State and the North Carolina Prohibitionist. This is natural, as they hunt in couples, and what pleases one will be sure to please the other.

CIRCULATES LARGELY IN THE COUNTRY... OULFORD, ROCKINGHAM, ORAN, VILLER, GASTON, FURCH, ALA...

self that it was his good fortune to make the first address of the kind at that point since the completion of the road to Mt. Airy, and he congratulated his fellow-citizens that for the first time in a quarter of a century, all men, of whatever political affiliation, were enabled to participate in a business campaign—one in which the great issues appealed solely to judgment and reason, divested of all passion and sectional feeling. He was there to discuss mainly Federal politics, and would touch only slightly on State issues. He called attention to the fact that throughout North Carolina a Democratic administration had been carried on for fifteen years without complaint; that in the great campaign of 1876 the Constitutional Amendments, embraced in which was that which gave to us the present system of county government, were voted upon by the people, and had received majorities far ahead of the rest of the ticket; again in 1878, in 1880 and in 1884 the thoughtful voters of both parties had in effect said: let the county government remain as it is. With our peculiar political system Americans have two governments to sustain: the present State government, by direct taxation, and the Federal government, by an indirect tax of tariff except in cases of emergency, as the war of the Revolution, of 1812 and the great civil struggle. He appeared before his fellow-citizens on this occasion to answer the questions "What had the Democrats done?" and "What had the Republicans done?" A party, like an individual, is to be judged by its acts, and he addressed himself to a calm and dispassionate consideration of the great questions which were submitted to the masses, not as a partisan politician but as a tax-payer, a citizen of North Carolina and of Guilford County.
