Walt and Hope.

How She Refused Him.
A poet's wildest, fondest dream:
Her lovely sun-kissed hair,
Curled artlessly in dainty waves.
Her sweet blue eyes above,
And while he gazed in ecstasy
The hand played.

Love.
And when he ventured to request
The favor of a dance,
She acquiesced so charmingly,
With such a wild pleased glance,
His heart beat faster than before,
No longer did he hope,
And while he "autographed" her card
The hand played.

Walt and Hope.
And then, when the many waltzes
Her form full of grace
He pressed, and watched the blushes
come.

And gotten her face,
He felt at length he like to make
The maiden life for ayer
Not how he pondered, and the hand
Played "Love."
