THE SONG OF WORK.

Work! Work! Work!
With heart and hand,
Thou shalt find the land
That plenty fills the land;
For every stroke which labor gives
In the sweat and blood of toil,
All wealth is made by labor's power;
Liberate the soul and wealth the flower.
Work! Work! Work!
And be a noble man,
As labor's men are;
And thou shalt find the land
That plenty fills the land;
For every stroke which labor gives
In the sweat and blood of toil,
All wealth is made by labor's power;
Liberate the soul and wealth the flower.
Work! Work! Work!
Thou shalt find the land
That plenty fills the land;
For every stroke which labor gives
In the sweat and blood of toil,
All wealth is made by labor's power;
Liberate the soul and wealth the flower.
Work! Work! Work!
Thou shalt find the land
That plenty fills the land;
For every stroke which labor gives
In the sweat and blood of toil,
All wealth is made by labor's power;
Liberate the soul and wealth the flower.

THE DEACON'S PROPOSAL.

"Will you marry me?" cried Dolly, running in great haste down the lane one bright spring morning.
"What's the good of that?" said Will, pulling up the deacon's old horse steadily at the gate. "Much obliged to you, I'm sure, for coming down here to see me, as he waits."
"Don't tease, Will; I had a reason for coming of course. Is Deacon Brackett and Hilly to be for a while. He was last yesterday, clipping up in the lard pasture.
"Is it a bad cut, Will?"
"No, that's only a flesh wound, but it will confine him to the house for a week or two, I suppose. Are you confused over the matter?"
"No, of course not; but Aunt Serena scolded me to ask."
"Oh, then she's coming?"
"Well, she's coming for the deacon for?"
"Well, replied Dolly, "I suppose she couldn't wait anything about it, but we'll let her deacon want to see the ten-acre field, and Aunt Serena will pay him as much for it as any one else can afford to. It joins her lot, you know, and she always said it ought to belong to the farm."
"See that it is," said Will; "didn't you know, seeing it's her year, but she might have some ideas."
"Nonsense! I wish she had, though.
She said only this morning, jokingly, she'd give a good mind to propose to the first single man she met, and I'll take her word for it, and it will take all the crops she can raise to pay for raising them."
"That's about the case at home," exclaimed Will. "Mary Jane's mother's taken sick and sent for this morning, and I've just carried her to the depot, and the deacon's lame and that leaves him with no housekeeper."
"Depo-ty!" called her Aunt Serena from the door. "The clo'es are bilin' an' the butter has come."
"Ah! my coming! Good-by, Will!"
"Good-by, Dolly; I guess Miss Dana can't see the field." Dolly ran into the house, and while her aunt-stamped the golden balls of butter she deftly rinsed, wrung and hung the snowy clothes on the line.
"Aunt Serena," asked Dolly at dinner, "has she sent for any more of the second crop of tea, having noticed this was her most communicative time, "Deacon Brackett is a nice man, isn't he?"
"Law sakes, child, there ain't a better nowhere about. Savin' is a good calculator; who ever find one man his equal you'll find ninety-nine more."
"I wonder why he never married?"
"I can't tell you that, I'm sure. Perhaps the deacon's a little too particular. Taint every woman could suit him, brought up as he was."
"No, I don't say of but me, and that's you, Aunt Serena."
"Don't be foolish, Dorothy," said Miss Damo, sharply. And Dolly, satisfied that her aunt would say nothing further on the subject, maintained a suspicious silence. In the meantime Will had lunched home, where he found the deacon lying on the lounge, grousing dimly with the pain in his right foot.
"Did you get the liment, William?" queried he, anxiously.
"Yes, she gave it to me. Shall I bathe your feet now?"
"No, you may loosen the bandages a bit, though, if you'd mind to. How on earth are we going to get along till Mary Jane comes back in a week. I know."
"Well," answered Will, after an explosion of the larder, "there's plenty of cold ham and three loaves of bread, and I can boil eggs and roast potatoes, so we shan't starve for awhile, guess."
"Melba, our angel got brother John's shinny shawl, 'eh?"
"Can't," said Will promptly; "she ain't at home."
"Then it's no use going for her," groaned the deacon.
"Not a mite," replied Will. "By the way, when I came by the Dame's place, Dolly came down to the gate and said her Aunt Serena was coming over here this afternoon."
"C'mon here this afternoon?" echoed the deacon. "It's about that ten-thirty, I guess."
"Yes," said Will, "I guess a—I think—that is, that is," then desperately, "it's her year, you know."
"And what of it?" queried the deacon obtusely.
"Nothing—only—well, I heard Miss Damo said she'd give a good mind to take advantage of it's being her year. You see, she's plained about getting hitched and her farm does need a man to overlook it."
"Well," said the deacon, crossing his shawl, "you'd best never forget that," returned Will, not daring to meet the deacon's eye.
"Well, that's best of all!"
"Will was already out of hearing,

A Georgia Sensation.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 30.—Ten years ago Georgia was shocked from one end of the State to the other by the murder of a well known druggist named Simmons by another well known man named Samuel Hill. Hill had a beautiful wife and asserted that Simmons was intimidated with her. The murder was a cold blooded one and occurred in the old National hotel bar. The murderer barely escaped mob justice. These was the exciting trial which created more interest than any trial before or since. Hill's beautiful young wife testifying in her husband's behalf.
The jury found him guilty with a recommendation for mercy. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. Hill's counsel subsequently succeeded in having him sent to the lunatic asylum. In a short time he escaped and went to Texas.
He has not since been heard of until last Friday, in Chicago, when under an assumed name he met several members of the Georgia legislative committee visiting the World's Fair buildings. The meeting was a sensational one and an account of it has just leaked out. Hill was well dressed and apparently in good circumstances.
After an introduction to Col.
Bill Moore, editor of the Augusta (Ga.) News, one of the legislative committee, Mr. Hill, called against the charges for entertaining a party of men from a State where they were sent to the penitentiary for life for protecting their own home.
With a tone of resentment, Col.
Moore replied:
"Why I don't know of such a case ever having occurred in Georgia."
"Well, I do," said the stranger.
"Why, what was it?" questioned his hearers with increased surprise.
"It was the case of a man named Samuel Hill," replied the stranger, warming up.
"Oh, yes," exclaimed one of the party with Moore. "I remember Sam Hill, but that wasn't the kind of a case I was thinking of. Why, Sam Hill was a good-for-nothing fellow, who ought to have been hanged on general principles." Hill—"But I know better, gentlemen," persisted the stranger with a great display of earnestness.
Hill—"How do you know it?" asked one of the party as soon as his surprise would allow him to put the question.
"Because I am Sam Hill," declared the stranger, throwing his head back dramatically and gazing with defiance at his hearers.
As he made this startling announcement, his hand crept into his pocket. Simultaneously the hands of Moore's two friends dived into their hip pockets. Moore didn't stir. He was dumfounded and unarmed. For a moment it looked as if a fight would surely follow. Moore and his friends dis-claimed anything but heresy knowledge of the case when they learned that they were talking to Hill. Hill asked for an introduction to Gov. Northen, then at the Auditorium Hotel, but the gentleman dissuaded him, saying he would be turned over to the authorities immediately. Hill's home is in Toronto, where he is known as Chalmers. Hill and both of Moore's friends were armed and a tragedy was narrowly averted. The publication of the facts of the meeting caused a great sensation throughout Georgia.—News and Observer.

HOW THE POPULISTS WILL VOTE.

The Senator Kyle intimates that They Will Act With the Democrats.
Senators Gorman, Brice and Carlisle, who went to New York to consult about the Senate contests now pending in certain Western States, have returned to Washington. With their return comes the report that the representatives of the People's party in Congress will act with the Democrats in the next Congress. Already steps have been taken to strengthen that friendship between the Democrats and the Populists in the House and Senate. Senator Kyle, the recognized leader of the Populists in Congress, was asked to-day if he intended to vote with the Democrats in the reorganization of the Senate. He said he was not prepared to commit himself irrevocably, on that subject.
"But," said he, "since I have been a member of the Senate I have voted nine times out of every ten with the Democrats. There is much in common between our people and the Democrats. They are fighting for economy in the public expenditures; so are we. They are fighting for a reduction of taxation; so are we. We may differ somewhat on money questions, but in general principles there is more in the Democratic party to attract us than there is to be found in the Republican party. During my entire service in the Senate I have never received a suggestion from a Democratic Senator as to how I should vote on the various questions that have been presented. I have followed my own inclination and voted in accordance with my convictions, with the result that in almost every instance I have found myself acting with the Democrats.
I am not making any pledges for the future, but will continue to follow the dictates of conscience in passing upon all public questions that come before the Senate."

A Prisoner Goes Crazy and Tries to Kill a Colleague.

At the recent term of Swain county court a young man named Edwards was tried and convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to the penitentiary for a ten years' term. Edwards was brought to Asheville and placed in Bancroft jail. He had Maj. W. H. Malone called, and employed that gentleman as his attorney.
Two or three days ago Edwards began to act strangely, but nothing was thought of this until he later attempted to kill a cell-mate, Mark Hayes, making a fur-riously attack on him with an empty bottle. So violent did Edwards become that Hayes had to be removed to another cell. It is thought that Edwards has lost his mind by brooding over the crime and his sentence.
Edwards' mother was here yesterday to see her son, and was recognized by him, but he seems to know no one else, and takes no notice of what transpires about him.
County Physician C. E. Hilliard will make an examination of Edwards.
The crazy man committed the deed, for which he was sentenced, in Graham county, from which county the case was removed to Swain. Edwards is a school teacher, and belongs to one of the best families in Roane county, Tenn.

THE BISHOP'S JOKE.
The Charlotte People Wanted to Keep Dr. Creasy.
The Charlotte Observer's Winston correspondent relates one of Bishop Hendrix's jokes in this way:
"Messrs. E. M. Andrews and J.
S. Spencer of Charlotte were here yesterday consulting with the bishop relative to the report that Dr.
Creasy was to be removed to Asheville. 'A good one' (which comes from an authenticated source) is held on the presiding elder of the Charlotte district. He was discussing the question with the bishop about Dr. Creasy being sent to Asheville—the of course was opposed to the change. The bishop asked the presiding elder if Dr.
Creasy's health was not rather bad just now. 'Yes,' replied Mr. Yoer, 'he appears to be suffering with nervous prostration.' 'Well,' said Bishop Hendrix, 'perhaps a change would do him good.' It is necessary to add that the presiding elder cut short off his argument on the line of Dr. Creasy's health." A Fight With Bandits.
CORRYVILLE, Kans., Dec. 14.—A battle with bandits occurred here yesterday between Detective Dickey, of the Pacific Express company and Deputy United States Marshal Wilson, on one and members of the Starr-Newton gang on the other. Wilson was killed and Dickey wounded.
On Monday night, at Allen, S.
C. Thomas G. Lamar shot and killed Mayor R. A. Chaffee, and was in turn mortally wounded by Chaffee. Marshal Robert Gaston was likewise fatally shot. Chaffee and the marshal were trying to arrest Lamar.

Discontent.

I was stitching, stitching, stitching, One beautiful afternoon, My thoughts flew like my needle,
Or a shuttle within a loom.
I compared my life to a treadmill, Ever moving the same old way;
The same tedious stitching and stitching From morn till close of day.
Then I thought of the tolling millions All striving their 'read to gain, Till the picture grew so vivid That I bowed my head in shame; Ashamed to think I should murmur Because I had plenty of work, While scores of God's good creatures Are living in squalor and dirt.
We wish for the wealth of a magpie To drive patient toil from the door, Yet then we would not be contented,
And stretch out our hands for more;
And so it goes on the world over,
Not one quite content or at ease.
What sort of a world would we live in If everyone lived as they please?
So I think it is just as it should be;
Feel thankful for blessings that come; Speak well of your friends and your neighbor,
Do just by everyone.
A North Carolinian Honored President Winston of the University has accepted an invitation to address the Nineteenth Century Club of New York, on the subject of the negro. This club is composed of some of the best people in New York, who during each winter season invite prominent thinkers and workers in all fields of human research and activity to present their views to its audience.
Mr. Brander Matthews is president, and among the Vice Presidents are Mr. Parke Godwin, Mrs. Courtland Palmer, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Mr. Moncure D. Conway, Mrs. Dudley Field, Mrs. M. Putman Jacobi and Mr. Anson Phelps Stokes. It is quite a compliment, says the Raleigh News and Observer, to President Winston to have been invited to address the Nineteenth Century Club at New York.
The most prominent celebrities discuss questions before that body, and President Winston is now to take his appropriate place in the galaxy. That North Carolina will have reason to applaud the result of his effort need not be said.
To every new subscriber from now until January 1st, we will give a Blum's Almanac Damaging Fire in Leaksville.
LEAKSVILLE, N. C., Dec. 14.—A disastrous fire occurred here this morning, destroying five store houses, including the postoffice, in the business part of the town. They were partly insured. The loss is heavy.
Shiloh's Cure, for the Great Cough and Group Cures, is for sale in Pocket Size containing twenty-doses, only 25c.
Children love it. For sale by Richardson & Jarvis.
A Dooly county man who had been led to believe that the third party was composed of the chosen apostles of Christ, and that their platform was a divine revelation, became so dependent over the election results that he determined to commit suicide and go on to heaven alone, and not wait for his party to establish heaven here on earth. He hopped around for several days, his wife closely watching him. Finally he disappeared, and she rushed to the barn in search of him. There he was with the headstall of a strong blind bridle fastened about his neck and the rope reins tied to a joist, just in the act of choking himself, when he was rescued by the neighbors who came rushing to the rescue, and reached the barn just in time to cut the rope, and release the struggling would-be suicide. Opening his eyes he suspended: "Oh, what made ye cut me a loose? 'n'bout two minutes more I'd a ben a-walkin' the streets of the New Jerusalem!" "Yes, ye mought, John, that's a fact," said the wife, soothingly; "but wouldn't you cut a devil of a shine a pracin' down the streets of the New Jerusalem with a third party badge and a blind bridle on? Now, wouldn't ye?"—Chicago Journal.
