THE PALACE OF THE YEAR.

An open door, where God's great angel stands;
Without, the star-sown midnight and the cold,
A shroud of darkness round the dead world rolled;
Within, a many-chambered palace fair;
Along the walls, like painted tapestry,
Waver the shadowy shapes of things to be;
Love self-surrendered, crowned with golden hair,
The sacrifice of married lips and hands;
There, with footman meets in ghostly flight,
On strange dim fields in lands unknown,
There, Victoria's lifted helm shines like a star;
O'er some dead passion falls the night
Of silence and defeat and vanquished Right.
And every chamber is a fair new day,
Full of all power and possibility,
And in our hands Gods lay the golden key.

LANGON'S MILL ROMANCE.

A Story from Old North Carolina Mountains.
In a picturesque corner among the Carolina hills there is an old mill, concerning which strange traditions are told. The lower story is built of unhewn rock, while the upper story consists of two substantial rooms. One of the rooms is larger than the other, the smaller one being a mere closet in comparison with the front apartment. The mill looks as though it had been built to resist a siege, and it surely has witnessed many strange and horrible scenes, even if but the half that is told is true.
The mill was built just before the war of the Revolution. It is appropriately situated at the foot of a red hill. The trees that stand around are massive, but few. A gray and solitary yeamore grows near the little bridge and stands like a shrouded form; the rest of the trees are oak. The trumpet vine is now rank near the entrance to the building, and its blooms are to the fanciful mind the gory fingers of a murderer, reaching with their fresh blood to his victim. The port weed is there, too, with its red stalk, red berries and reddish leaves. The little stream almost encircles the mill in a sinuous line.
About the beginning of the Revolution several Tory families inhabited the country. A young man of one of these families loved the daughter of a zealous Whig, and the day had been appointed for the marriage. When it was first whispered among the neighbors that the youth had sided with the Tories, the girl was almost broken hearted, but declared that she would not believe the fact till she had heard it from his own lips.
Sooner than she expected she had the chance. One evening as she was milking the cows her lover jumped over the fence and stood before her. She told him instantly what she had heard, expecting a vehement denial.
"Yes," he said; "it is all true, and before another year your father will wish he was I am."
"He would see his grave first," the girl indignantly replied.
"He may not have far to go to find it," the young man vowed, with a peculiar intonation in his voice.
He persisted in following the girl, against her will, to the house. The girl's father was there and he forbade his neighbor entrance, saying an enemy to his country was not welcomed in his house. She angrily sanctioned, by word and manner, the action of her father. Tradition does not tell all that followed. However, the young man, whose name was Jack Colton, left in a towering rage, swearing that when next he returned he would enter if he pleased; went away and was seen no more until a year afterward. Pretty Nancy Langon continued to milk her cows.
"There was no such tumult and confusion in the country that people became inured to danger and were not afraid. And Nancy, a large buxom maiden of 18, was proud of her own courage. Her mother was an invalid and timid, and she closed the shutters if the wind was heard among the pines. "It all sounded like the groans of dying men," she would say. Her husband and four sons were with General Greene, and even the slightest suggestion of their death was terrible to her. Her younger daughter Eva was of her temperament. She shivered, too, when the wind blew too hard or when a neighboring woman brought in the

THE EXPOSITION CLOSED.

Atlanta's Great Fair a Financial and Artistic Success.
ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 31.—The International and Cotton States Exposition, which was opened September 18, was closed to-night after a most successful career of 100 days.
The final day opened clear and bright. During the early morning the temperature was very low, but after the sun rose the weather moderated rapidly and the grounds were thronged. Many of the exhibitors had a large harvest in the sale of souvenirs, while the Chinese village auctioned off the bric-a-brac. The exhibits were all in good shape and were not disturbed until after dark.
This evening the beautiful illumination was given and the electric fountain displayed its charms for the multitude. To-night a force of experts began packing up the pictures in the art gallery, and a similar work was begun on the government exhibit and the Mines and Forestry Building.
Mr. Inman, chairman of the finance committee, said the exposition, when all the debts are paid, will have cost the city of Atlanta about $200,000, or less than 10 per cent. of the money expended on the enterprise. This includes the original subscription and the appropriation made by the city. The result is regarded as very satisfactory. It is estimated that the immediate benefit to Atlanta in money expended here by exposition visitors amounts to $5,000,000 and that the ultimate benefits to the city and the cotton States are immeasurably beyond this or any other conservative figure that could be approximately stated.
The last day of the exposition was devoted to the women. It is a day held in honor of the work done by the committees of ladies in the different departments and the members of the women's board. The tickets were of attractive form, the bearing likeness of Mrs. Joseph Thompson stamped thereon.
The women have achieved an important part in the Atlanta Exposition. By their aid many pleasant features have been added to the programme each day.
All of the directors of the exposition and all members of the women's board held a final reunion in the assembly room of the woman's building.
Mr. Potter Palmer, of Chicago, has sent his check for $1,000 to Mrs. Joseph Thompson to be used in the maintenance of the woman's building for some permanent enterprise for the advancement of women, or for any other object of charity to which Mrs. Thompson may elect to apply it.
It has not been determined what will be the fate of the woman's building. The original intention of the board was that it should be a permanent building and should be utilized in some appropriate way. It has been impossible to consider this question, however, during the busy exposition days, and it is therefore a matter for after consideration.
The old Liberty Bell, which has been an object of veneration at the exposition, will be returned to Philadelphia in state. A committee will leave Philadelphia January 16 and arrive here on the following day. The return trip will be begun on the 18th.

The South Ignored.
A careful examination of the composition of the committees of the House by Speaker Reed shows that not a single first or second or third class chairmanship is given to the South, and that in all the states that succeeded in 1861 only one little tenth-rank chairmanship is bestowed. New England got eleven, including such important committees as the Ways and Means, Naval Affairs, Banking and Currency, Patents, and so on.
The South gets one little insignificant committee, that of Expenditures on Public Buildings, it going to Mr. Settle, of North Carolina. This is not the committee on Public Buildings, as has been supposed. That important committee goes, of course, to a New Englander, Mr. Millican, of Maine. The committee, of which a North Carolinian is chairman, merely examines on public buildings, and does not make assignments of committee seats in Congress. Mr. Settle deserves better than this. The 18,000,000 people of the South deserved better representation, if they were to be given anything at all.
If Speaker Reed had studied to ignore and insult the South, he could not have succeeded better.
And yet the Southern men are advised that if they want the recognition they merit, they ought to go into the Republican party. That advice was taken in some of the Southern States last year, with the recognition above stated.
Mr. Settle's pride and his public exhibition of toadyism to Reed will but his mouth, but the people of all parties in the South will be indignant at the Speaker's studied policy to ignore Southern men, and to make it impossible for Southern Republicans to exercise the least influence in shaping legislation.—News and Observer.
