The letter, which is dated December

"When you receive these few lines I act I don't like to tell, for it may hurt the feelings of other people. A few months ago I had a fortune in my grasp, but I sunk it on the coast of Cuba, and have not been able to res cue it on account of the misplaced confidence I had in people I considered to and tell him that I am dead. Also inform him that the treasure is at the second little inlet from the inlet from Santiago entrance toward the wrecks. Your son, HARRY."

On the leaf on an advertising pamphlet found in Moore's room was the name of J. B. Trainer, of No. 1,835

Moore, who was twenty-six years old, was a seafaring man, and his parents has not seen him for two years. His father, who came to the city today, knew nothing of the fortune rethat he had been in Havana several months and left the impression that he had served the United States in some capacity during the Spanish

A Naval Governor for Guam.

The Island of Guam will probably be different from the other colonial possessions or dependencies of the United States in having a naval instead of a military governor. The sole reason for the acquirement of the island was to obtain a conveniently located naval station for our warships, and that being the case the navy will have exclusive control. The command will be of importance, for the island has a population of more than 8,000 people, about 1,400 of whom are of European extraction.
