A Parallel.

A correspondent of a Boston paper calls attention to the similarity of conditions in Hayti and the Philippines and the failure of England and France to conquer the Haytians. Both have a tropical climate deadly to the white races, the great difference being that the Philippines are about four times as large as Hayti. The English, says the correspondent, in 1793 invaded Hayti and left in 1798, after losing $100,000,000 in expenses and 45,000 lives.
