

The Tobacco Plant.

DURHAM, N. C., WEDNESDAY MARCH 21, 1877.

No. 7

THE TOBACCO PLANT.

OUR ADVERTISING RATES ARE LOW, AND CIR-CULATION LARGE.

Advertising Rates.

One Square one insertion.....	$1.00
One Square two insertions.....	1.50
One square one month.....	2.50
1/2 column, twelve months.....	30.00
1/4 column twelve months.....	60.00
One column, twelve months.....	100.00

Advertise with us and you will find that it will be to your interest.

"I will wear this to-night, Midge."
"Why, Elsie! what an exquisite thing!"

two exceptions, just judgments. Hall, although refusing to take the civic oath of Cromwell, yet was made one of his judges.

triumphant car? Are the clanking of your chains to be heard mingling with your hosannah to liberty and free government? If the fraudulent action of a villainous returning board of a State is so sacred in your eyes that you reason of State rights you will not go behind the certificates of a Governor whom you have adjudged a usurper, how dare you longer keep your soldiers there to sustain the thieves who have been necessary to your disgrace, unless it is by a bargain with successors in villainy?

ter of the eloquence of our Senate in the eye of foreign nations, that the sparkling wit, concentrated thoughts, aphoristic style, and classic taste of John Randolph of Roanoke.

when the dew is on, I take a small dish of fine salt, and walking around the rows sprinkle a little patch of salt on the centre of each plant. When the leaves begin to grow I repeat the salting, and when the centre of the leaves begin to form the head, I apply salt again scattering it over the leaves; after this I look them over occasionally, and if I find plants that do not head well and appear diseased, I sprinkle the same freely; this will save all the quart of salt is sufficient to cover a row, although it is not a safety.

JONES WALKER
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Hillsboro, N. C.
Will attend Durham every Wednesday and can be seen at his office in Caspell Hill every other day.

A. W. GRAHAM
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Hillsboro, N. C.
Will be at Durham every Wednesday where he can be seen at his office over Styron's store. Office also in Hillsboro. Claims collected in all parts of the State No. 1917

Bumpass & Lunsford
ATTORNEYS AT LAW
Hillsboro, N. C.
P. M. BRIGGS,
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
And Real Estate Agent, Durham, N. C.
Special attention given to the collection of claims.
Office under Plankers Warehouse, 9-10

DR. J. D. DAVIS
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
All work warranted to give satisfaction.
Office over Higbee & Watts Store.

HOWARD HOUSE
HOWARD AND BALTIMORE STREETS,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Accommodates three hundred guests.
TERMS, $1.50 $2.50 per day.
J. D. ALLEN

S. H. WEBB & CO.
INSURANCE AGENTS
Offer their services to the citizens of Orange and adjoining counties.
They represent ten first-class Fire Insurance Companies, and guarantee entire satisfaction. Call on us and we will give you the worth of your money.
S. H. Webb, H. Hamilton.
5-6m

G. TEISER,
IS SELLING OUT HIS FALL & WINTER
GOODS
AT REDUCED
PRICES PREPARING TO BRING IN A LARGE SPRING STOCK.
NOW IS THE TIME TO GET BARGAINS.
BE SURE TO CALL
BEFORE BUYING
ELSEWHERE

And opening the diamond studded jacket which hung from the chain she showed me the picture within.

Our judges of the Supreme Court hold their offices for life, with liberal salaries; are independent of the mutations of politics, each having his personal and political honor to maintain, and I thought that surely there—if the depravity of Radicalism was at universal—we could find integrity. My confidence was generous, patriotic, undoubting in these men and for cause submitted. But in this 1857 Commission, a set of judges were named, in part of the banded jockies, and have done in the face of the world that which hungry mountebanks should scorn. They have done

Such an act,
That blurs the truest blush of modesty;
Calls virtue hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead;

Internal improvements by the general government, a protective tariff, and the Missouri question, were the great subjects that agitated the country during the administration of Mr. Monroe, and these found in John Randolph a stern and uncompromising opponent. To the Missouri compromise he was decidedly opposed. On this question he stood with Nathaniel Bacon of North Carolina, with whom he was on terms of great intimacy, and Judge Spencer Bland, of Virginia, two of the most consistent State-rights men of the day.

How to Secure a Stand of Clover.

As the season for sowing clover seed is near at hand, with your permission, I will give my experience through your columns. Having failed several years in securing a good stand of grass, I concluded to try the experiment of harrowing in the seed, I am happy to say it is no longer an experiment with me. My plan is to sow clover seed when the ground is in good order (not yet) first of April is soon enough; run a harrow over it with the teeth sloping backward; cross harrow it immediately, and if the work is done properly, you are sure of a good stand of grass. With the right kind of a harrow, there need be no fear of pulling down the wheat, but it will pay to harrow wheat, even where no grass seed is sown. For several years I would harrow one field and leave one. The grass looked about as well on one as the other, until the hot sun came, then on the field that was not harrowed, the clover disappeared, having no depth of root, while the harrowed field was covered with a magnificent stand of grass. I have never seen any one fail to get a good stand of grass where the seed was well harrowed. One harrowing is not sufficient. Experience will prove that three harrowings is better than two, but I have succeeded in two by weighing down the harrow where there was a hard crust on the surface. Brother farmers, try the experiment this spring. —Durham in Southern Planter and Farmer.

Read and be Convinced.

I take great pleasure in announcing to my friends, and the tobacco growers of Orange, Granville, Person and other counties that I have connected myself with the Old and World Renowned Farmers Warehouse, of Durham, for the sale of leaf tobacco, under the name and style of Walker, Lyon & Co. My lifetime experience in the tobacco business prompts me to say to the farmers and shippers, that we can, and will do much for your interest as any Warehouse on this market.

When the olive branch of peace was again restored to our country, his sagacious, comprehensive, and generalizing mind was employed in building up the national bank of 1811 and 1816; and, such was the distracted financial condition of the country, that the "strict construction" doctrine of President Madison quailed before him, while the small Cassandra voice of John Randolph was scarcely heard in the opposition. Borne aloft on the popular breeze, he seized upon scenes of magnificence and greatness that brooked no constitutional restraint; while his unbridled ambition, dissatisfied with the paternity of the American system, longed to embrace the horizon within the scope of his philanthropy. One more step, and he would vault into the presidential chair.

I am Truly Yours,
T. B. LYON, JR.
Don't forget that the live man, and anoncer, C. A. W. Barham, sells our tobacco.

GOOD ADVICE.
Now is the time of year for Fenestrals, Lung Fever, &c. Every family should have a bottle of ROSCHE'S GERMAN STRUP. Don't allow for one moment that cough to take hold of your child, your family or yourself. Consumption, Asthma, Facunaria, Croup, Hemorrhages, and other fatal diseases may be cured. Although it is true GERMAN STRUP is curing thousands of these dreaded diseases, yet it is much better to have it at hand when these diseases will cure you. One bottle will last your whole family a winter and keep you safe from danger. If you are consumptive, do not rest until you have tried this remedy. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by your Druggist, Blackhall & Son.

HOUSE AND LOT IN DURHAM FOR SALE.
Sitting on Hillsboro street in the western part of town. The house contains three parlors and rooms, closets &c. There is a well underneath water on the lot. The place is enclosed with a good fence. Terms half cash, the rest payable in nine months. Apply to M. C. Workman, or to the PLANT office. The house is insured for one year. 6-11.

Then all was confusion. The young people did not stay for the promised ride, and to a darkened room they carried the old gentleman, while a physician was hastily sent for. No one could account for the strange attack until, after a long time, awake to consciousness.

Such an act,
That blurs the truest blush of modesty;
Calls virtue hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead;

What of the South? The conduct of her Representatives during the last few months has refuted theanders of years. Their votes and utterances here have been for peace, law, order.

Henry Clay was a man that would adorn any age, or country. Sprung from a poor, but respectable family in Hanover county, Virginia, by dint of his own exertions in aid of the transcendent abilities vouchsafed by Heaven, he had gradually risen from deputy clerk to a member of Congress—speaker of the House of Representatives, and finally, Secretary of State under Adams's administration. Able, bland, and conciliatory in deportment—enthusiastic, bold, and energetic in action—his brilliant imagination, graceful gestures, and mellifluous tones, awayed popular sentiment and rendered him the idol of the masses. Thrown into public life at the opening of the war of 1812, he made his brilliant debut in calling his excited countrymen to arms against the wrongs of the British government, while Randolph's voice pleaded for peace.

John Randolph of Roanoke.

With the war of 1812, the prejudices and passions it excited also passed away; and John Randolph was again called to the Supreme Council of the nation with a degree of popularity that showed how strong a hold he had obtained upon the confidence and affections of the people. It was during the Monroe administration, that "era of good feelings" that his peculiar and eccentric genius shone forth with distinguished lustre. The rhetorical dogma of Jefferson, "We are all Federalists, we are all Republicans," was now fully realized—old party lines and the appetites they engaged were obliterated—and men again occupied in the national council and the public eye, that influence and position, which integrity, long public services, and eminent talents, deservedly receive. And in that splendid galaxy of eminent men with which a bountiful Providence at this time favored our nation, it is yet a question of doubt whether the firm, and graceful eloquence of Clay, the massive and energetic thoughts of Webster, and the concentrated logic of Calhoun, have contributed more to elevate the charac-

And without stopping to explain her ambiguous sentence or answer my question she departed. When Deb came in to the room again, it was to say uncle was better and wanted Elsie. When we were alone Deb told me a strange story—that my uncle had had a child, a beautiful daughter, who had married against his will, and whom he had refused to forgive until it was too late.

What of the South? The conduct of her Representatives during the last few months has refuted theanders of years. Their votes and utterances here have been for peace, law, order.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

House of Representatives.

February 24th,
Mr. G. W. ...

"Oh, mamma, isn't it a pity that uncle never had any children? He is so fond of seeing young folks enjoy themselves."
"Why not, mamma?"

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

When she reached the room again, she saw the young woman had fainted, as she supposed. But it was not a faint—it was death. No inquiries could discover who she was, and she was quietly buried—dear, good madame herself erecting a plain monument to her memory. The baby's clothes were marked "Elsie Ventnor," and so madame called her.

Democracy, peace, courage, prudence, moderation! I implore you now to remember the millions whom we represent.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.

As I have stood here for moderation and peace throughout this Congress, I accept to-day defeat, bitter as it is, rather than dishonor. I bear the ills I have rather than fly to those I know not of." When I am asked to give my vote to resist the execution of this law, my answer is, no objective point is given to which we would move that would not bring upon us confusion, anarchy, and chaos.