jurisdiction in larceny cases. They ought to know that the trial by jury is one of the dearest rights we have, and the idea that a justice of the peace, who hasn't time to be learned in the law, who hasn't time to give much attention to trying cases, should pass upon a man's liberty without a jury, no court, we may say, is perfectly preposterous. Mr. Oakley thinks it is all well enough when a poor negro has been accused of stealing a chicken, to let a magistrate try him. But, Mr. Oakley, suppose a charge were made against you, absolutely unfounded in truth, would you think $1,000 of the county's money would be badly spent trying to establish your innocence? The question to be answered in the trial of a criminal is this: "Is he guilty?" Mr. Oakley, if his speech is a fair exponent of his feelings, seems to think the only question that ought to be considered is this: "How cheaply can a nigger be sent to the Penitentiary?" We believe the trial by jury is the best method that has yet been devised. A guilty man may now and then escape. A negro who has stolen a chicken may some times cost more than the chicken is worth; but when we consider that this machinery which sends a negro to the penitentiary who steals a chicken, protects the horse in the stable; that this same machinery that requires a negro charged with stealing a chicken to be tried by a jury, protects all, both rich and poor in the enjoyment of that liberty for which Anglo Saxon blood has been spilled from Runnymede to Yorktown, we say let this remain until something better is given us. This machinery may fall into the hands of bad men as in 1868—when courts were made only the means of oppression—and remembering those days when female virtue was unprotected, when liberty was at the mercy of any scoundrel, when anarchy reigned unrestrained in our fair borders, we say we are willing to pay $500 to punish the theft of so small a thing as a chicken while we are certain that so great a thing as Justice weilds her sword untrammelled and Liberty stands with her foot on the dethroned monarch of misrule. Yes, the Democratic party has proven that it is trustworthy. Why not trust it? The Republican party, when it had an opportunity, wasted it, and showed to all that it was utterly faithless, cruel and tyrannical. Why give it another chance? It is composed largely of the same elements now as in '68. How can we be fooled into believing it is any better. Democrats, turn your back on all such movements as Oakley and Mangum have started. If you are dissatisfied with any minor matter of policy or government, fight it out outside the Democratic party. There is a fable which reads something like this: A flock of sheep had lived peacefully and safely under the guardianship of faithful shepherd dogs for a number of years. Some wolves one day got the ear of the sheep and said to them, "why do you stay here in this field kept in by these mean dogs? They are always barking at you, and making you go where you don't want to go. We will show you a better way. You just send the dogs off and come out of the field and we will take care of you, let you do as you please, and besides we won't bark at you." The foolish sheep did as the wolves requested. They sent away the dogs, and at once the wolves seized upon them and destroyed them, and the poor sheep too late called upon the dogs to protect them. The Democratic flock may be subjected to some little annoyance, the barking of the Democratic dogs may not be pleasant, the restraint of the Democratic fold may be a little irksome, but, if the dogs should be sent away, and Mangum & Oakley and the Republican wolves invited to take charge, ruin, waste and disaster may follow. "Let well enough alone." Stay in the fold. "Let us rather bear the ills we have than fly to those we know not of." Keep the Republican wolves out.

MANGUM AND OAKLEY'S PARTY.

We noticed three of the resolutions of the above named party last week. We will not longer take them up seriatim. The whole platform assumes one thing, and that is that the Democratic party is responsible for everything bad that has happened since the war. Now, we contend that Messrs. Mangum and Oakley are very unfair when they try to call attention to only the mistakes of the party, and slur over or leave unnoticed its good deeds. There are few Christian men whose lives cannot be made to appear wicked, if grumblers and designing men only notice their shortcomings, for all are prone to evil, and even the best of men occasionally commit sin. But the charity that we ought to have would lead us to look at the good done by good men, and forgive the shortcomings, if as a whole the lives of those men are round, and benevolent, and useful. So it ought to be with parties made up of men. Of course the Democratic party has made mistakes. Serious ones it may be. But when we find that great prosperity to the State, great good to the people, education to the masses have accrued from the dominance of the Democratic party, we think it only fair to say, as we would to a man, "your intentions are good, your general conduct is good, and we prefer to trust you again rather than put into power that party that did nothing good, nothing praiseworthy, but left, by its shameful conduct, a blot upon the State not yet entirely eradicated."

The platform of Messrs. Mangum & Oakley is composed of a series of resolutions which only complain. They know, or ought to know, that it is impossible under any form of government, at present, to accomplish half what they demand. They ought to know that the time has not come for working roads by taxation. They ought to know that it is impossible to commit to a magistrate

THE TRUE AND TRIED OF THE GRAND OLD PARTY IN COUNCIL.

John Betts "Agin" Mangum and Oakley.

Saturday at 2 o'clock, the Republicans attempted to hold a convention in Stokes Hall. Jno. Betts, the "old reverter," in a long tirade against his old yoke-fellow and fellow laborer, D. C. Mangum, called the convention to order, and Chas. Rogers, a gemin of color from Oak Grove township, was chosen chairman. Charles, as a clever, honest negro, is a success, but as chairman made a dead failure.

Mangum and Oakley and friends were prepared for the occasion. They had their heels on hand to run the meetin' and in spite of Rogers, Betts & Co., they succeeded. Beyond question they downed Betts and came off first best.

No nominations for legislative or county officers were made, from the fact that this arrangement would interfere with Mangum and Oakley, who are already in the field, the nominees of the Republican convention held the Saturday previous.

The convention endorsed Nichols for Congress, Mason for the Senate, and Strayhorn for Solicitor. As many as eight of the colored constituents of Mangum and Oakley would claim the floor and attempt to orate at one and the same time, and sometimes they succeeded. Bedlam was a happy name. Betts swore in his wrath that his meeting had been captured and his plans frustrated, but that he would see them "agin." Rufus Jones, Plummer, Wm. Pearson, John Jones, and others, were frequent speakers, and it is said that so great was the hubbub that one negro spoke during the entire meeting and it was not discovered until after the adjournment and he was found alone in his glory, still speaking.

One decent thing occurred though during the meeting—a respectable and intelligent looking darkey arose and placed in nomination as a candidate for the House of Representatives, Mr. John C. Angier.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Henry George—Blaine—Talmage

New York, Oct. 9.—There is really but one topic of public importance in the minds and talk of the people here, and that is the campaign of Henry George, the Labor Party's candidate for Mayor of the city. He has actively begun the canvass. More than 34,000 men have pledged themselves to vote for him. Every day he receives a large number of small contributions to his campaign fund not only from men of all classes of society here, but from other cities as well. The Henry George crowd have of course been ridiculed as "cranks." They have accepted the name, and their campaign badge is a crank. It is not impossible that the "crank party" will be adopted as a serious name. You know there are many precedents for such a thing. The "Loco-foco" party was first so called in derision; so were the "Barnstormers," and both of these became serious names. So likewise with the Mugwumps. They were thus called first in ridicule, but the name stuck. But when the George men are known as "cranks" or not, they are already playing a big game. It is not an impossible thing that they may carry the election. If they do, that will be the signal for the organization generally of a Workingman's party which, unlike its predecessors in recent years, will not stand still and stagnate, but will be the foundation of a new Free Trade party. It is the possibility of a general movement which lurks in this experiment that gives it such great importance. No body, in the present disorganization of parties here, dares to predict what will happen. The air is full of strange possibilities.

In New Jersey, as in Massachusetts and the other New England States, the Republican convention, just now adjourned, was named by Blaine men. It is the Blaine men who have the Republican machinery in almost all these North Atlantic States, and they are already making a desperate effort to have him renominated. The anti-Blaine Republicans have already given fair warning that they may be depended on again to vote for Cleveland as against Blaine; so that the best policy the Democrats can pursue is to give these Blaine fellows all the encouragement they can. If before 1888 this new Labor party should get itself on its feet, it may be a disturbing element. One thing is certain, the Labor party is in favor of Civil Service reform.

Mrs. Langtry, when she first went on the stage, went less as an actress than as a professional beauty; and people paid to see the woman and not her playing. It was predicted when she never could act. But the critics have been fooled again, as they often are. She has applied herself diligently to her profession, and everybody acknowledges that she is, to say the least of her, a very good actress indeed. The engagement she is now filling in New York is a very profitable one.

Active preparations are in progress for the formal inauguration of the great statue of Liberty. The United States military officers and the officers of the navy are now making up a programme for a great day of it. There will be speech-making in English and in French, fire works and music and dinner also, both in the evening and in the day of international courtesy and compliment. The statue will be one of the great things about New York or indeed in the world to see and to climb up—no, not to climb up, but to be rushed up in an elevator.

During the week there have been two or three of the most violently active days on Wall street that have come since the memorably brisk days of two years or more ago. The stock market has been feverish, and the business and benefit for the whole people, but for the interest of the office-holders, who are in truth the servants of the people.

"The other evil is the organization of the official class into a body of political mercenaries, governing the caucuses and dictating the nomination of their own party."

This is precisely the position taken by President Cleveland in his famous order to all employees of the Government to abstain from participation in caucuses and conventions. It is not original with Mr. Cleveland. It was not even original with Mr. Tilden. Each simply took the good, old, pure Democratic ground. If the Administration of the Government had come into Mr. Tilden's hands for four years, as a majority of the voters in the United States at the ballot-box directed it to come, he would have pursued the same policy that Mr. Cleveland is pursuing. The long and disgraceful delay in bringing about the reform was caused by Hayes, and Garfield and Arthur and their Republican Administrations. Mr. Cleveland took up the policy just where Mr. Tilden left it.

If, then, the President's civil service policy be not good Democracy, what is good Democracy? And by what standard are we to judge whether anything be good Democracy, if not by the deliberate utterances of the party in convention and the position of its greatest modern leader? THE TOBACCO PLANT desires least of all things to be tedious. Still it has no apology to make for publishing these documentary proofs of the Democratic soundness of the reform policy. We are profoundly convinced that both the opposition and apologetic approval of it in a few Democratic circles, especially in our own State, arises from a total misapprehension. And if we can remove such misapprehension concerning so important and so sound and so patriotic a doctrine, we conceive that we will have done the best service we can render alike to the Democratic party in North Carolina and to the spread of sound principles. Let us remember, then, that it was Tilden's doctrine.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE.

What They Are Doing.

Rufus H. Page, former Secretary of State, is seriously ill.

Col. Jas. T. Morehead will go to the Senate from Guilford.

Gen. M. W. Ransom begins October 12th, at Wilson, to canvass the east.

Capt. M. D. McNeill is the Democratic candidate for the House in Richmond county.

Judge Shepherd will preside over the next session of Vance court, beginning October 18th.

Vol. A. C. Davis, of Davis School, LaGrange, and his large corps of teachers will visit Goldsboro fair.

Dr. Kemp P. Battle will deliver the address at the Ronoque and Albemarle Fair, November 4th.

Col. Tazewell Hargrove, of Oxford, declines the chairmanship of the Republican State Executive Committee.

Mrs. Reeves, long known as a proprietor of hotels at Salisbury and Concord, died at Salisbury, Friday.

Sheriff Hardie, of Cumberland, while out hunting, sustained serious injuries by being thrown from his buggy.

Col. W. H. S. Burgwyn, it is whispered, will be asked to accept of the nomination to the Senate from Vance county.

Dr. B. F. Dixon, superintendent of the Orphan Asylum at Oxford, is emphatically the right man in the right place.

Rev. J. E. Underwood, of Granville-circuit, is now convalescing from a severe and prolonged attack of typhoid fever.

Ralph P. Buxton has been named as their candidate, by the Republicans, as Chief Justice pro Judge Bynum declined.

Rev. J. R. Brooks, D. D., preached the annual sermon before the Woman's Missionary Society at Goldsboro, Sunday, October 10th.

Maj. J. W. Wilson has severed his connection with the Western N. C. railroad. For several years he has been its chief engineer.

Dr. R. F. Hackett, late senator from Iredell, Alexander and Wilkes, died at his home at Wilkesboro, Tuesday morning, October 5th.

Rev. G. D. Langston, of Beaufort county, has been nominated by the Prohibitionists in the 1st district. He wants to help Barrett beat Maj. Latham.

DeLagend Haigh, son of Dr. T. D. Haigh, of Fayetteville, has recently been offered a professorship in the College of Pharmacy at Ann Arbor, Michigan.

F. M. Simmons, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the 2d district, is said to be making a splendid effort, and stands some chance of being elected.

Rev. J. A. Ramsey was elected stated clerk of the North Carolina Presbyterian Synod, at the recent session in Concord, over Rev. Wm. S. Lacy declined.

Judge David Schenck, who was in bad health during the summer, has been greatly benefited from the use of the waters of Combelly's springs at Lead Station.

M. W. Rollins writes the Asheville Advance under date of October 4th, that they have had three of the most destructive frosts in Madison county ever known.

H. C. McAllister has been nominated by the Democrats of Cabarrus for a seat in the next House of Representatives at Raleigh. He made a faithful member four years ago, and will do so again.

Jones county has nominated Lewis Bynum for the House in the next Legislature. We hope he may succeed in succeeding P. M. Peasall, who was the first Democrat Jones county had sent to Raleigh since the war.

Rev. J. B. King, the pastor of 2d Advent Baptist Church, Wilmington, has been for weeks engaged in a wonderfully successful revival. Nearly two hundred persons have professed religion, and the interest is unabated.

W. S. Webster, in a card in the News & Observer under date of October 2d, emphatically denies that Maj. Graham voted for a negro as assistant door-keeper in preference to supporting him, as charged by Col. Nichols.

Mr. T. O. Oliver, of Pine Level, has one hundred acres of cotton that experts say can't be beaten in the State. This is the kind of notoriety to seek after. In these days a man that can show most for his outlay is the "coming man."

Col. Thos. M. Holt has accepted the invitation to deliver the address at the Cumberland County Fair. A wise choice. Col. Holt is thoroughly identified with North Carolina. He is a successful man himself and delights to help others.

Oliver H. Dockery will be a candidate for the State Senate. As the Chronicle says, that means a vigorous contest for the Democratic nomination. And the same paper says, "My son Oliver has been defeated before and can stand it again."

Dr. C. W. Dabney has been traveling in the "east center" of the State in the interest of the State Weather Service. The News & Observer says the Messenger will take charge of the station at Goldsboro. Bro. Bonitz is all energy and will keep signals flying.

somebody has made great strokes of lucky fortune and somebody else hasn't. The old story is repeating itself. Men rich to-day are bankrupts to-morrow; and no one of the average men of the street is missed if he falls out of the ranks. A ten-millionaire's failure is talked about. The failure of a man who has only $250,000 or even $500,000 does not always supply even one day of gossip, unless when he falls he ruins himself. But such an event means the list of a man who drove his fine horses yesterday and lived in a fine house. But the great games in this greatest of all gambling places goes on just the same.
