

Etiquette of City Weddings.

How they are conducted and carried out by the wealthy.

The etiquette of a wedding differs somewhat in cities from that observed in the country, and it is with the former that we are now concerned.

"Mr. and Mrs. F.—request the pleasure of Mr. and Mrs. B.—in company at Trinity Chapel, on Wednesday, January 17, at one o'clock."

To this an answer should of course be returned. On the wedding morning the bridegroom sends the bride the wedding bouquet; he also sends a bouquet to each of the bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids are bound to be at the church in good time, and await the bride at the door. Her father also awaits her there.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the newly married couple, with their parents and immediate relatives, adjourn to the vestry to sign the register and receive the congratulations of their nearest connections.

home where hope is slowly giving way to despair.

Another child has entered, by the open door of sympathy, into all the families of the country.

There is some laughing and jesting about him; the hard-worked legal editor finds relief in an occasional pleasantry of bad taste, which disguises the interest he cannot help feeling in the pitiful story.

It is a singular proof of the enormous power and extent of newspaper publicity in creating and keeping alive a serious public feeling.

WASHINGTON MATTERS.

The Senate agreed to a conference asked for by the House on the tariff bill, and referred to the Judiciary Committee a resolution offered by Senator Hoar.

A joint resolution was presented making the office of President and Vice-President elective and the people the officers to hold their places six years.

The House adopted a resolution for the appointment of a committee to proceed to Victoria to investigate the troubles there.

The House, in considering the Legislative Appropriation bill, rejected a motion to increase the clerical force of the Department of Justice.

Tradition has it, that once in the centuries gone by, there lived a people in comfort, elegance and reasonably high state of civilization.

WHEELER & WILSON'S NEW NO. 6 SEWING MACHINE.

American Institute, New York—Judge's Report, Nov. 14, 1874.

THE BOARD OF MANAGERS: GENTLEMEN—After a full and impartial examination of the articles described, the undersigned judges make the following REPORT—(ABSTRACT): That Sewing-Machine No. 436 (Wheeler & Wilson's New No. 6) was claimed to be so great an improvement, both upon the well-known family machine made by the same company, and upon all other sewing-machines, as entitled to recognition as a new and valuable invention.

At the commencement of our examination we were provided with several complete sets of all the working parts as they came from the factory, and were at liberty to make our own selection for the construction of a complete machine in our presence.

The simple device for producing and varying the tension of the lower thread; the hollow steel needle-bar; the facility of applying and using many useful attachments—the hemmer, binder, cordier, ruffler, &c.

Having completed the construction of our trial machine, in the way indicated, and without the discoverable loss of so much as a single stitch, would convey an inadequate idea of the complete success achieved.

Beginning with a needle measuring but 17-1000 inch in diameter, and operating with the finest thread upon lace goods, the same machine passed through all the stages of needle and thread of all conceivable thicknesses and foldings and ridgings, and then with waxed thread stitching through portions of heavy harness leather.

After this demonstration of its range of work, we entered upon the nicer tests required for a family and light manufacturing machine. In this department we witnessed all the various and useful work which it was capable of doing, and also a degree of success in single and double ruffling which we believe unparalleled.

The minuteness of the care with which we have endeavored to examine these claims. We find the chief advantage of this machine to be in the use of a modified form of the rotary motion.

As the only conclusion to which we can arrive after an investigation of the several merits of each of the sewing-machines submitted, an investigation which we have endeavored to make patiently and completely in every respect, and accompanied these with our best judgment upon the merits of the several machines which are in use but not on exhibition:

The Ideal Farmer. Ralph Waldo Emerson, in his essays, thus portrays the glory of the farmer:

"Men do not like hard work but every man has an exceptional respect for tillage, and the feeling that this is the original calling of his race; that he himself is only excused from it by some circumstances which made him delegate it for a time to other hands.

The beauty of nature, the tranquility and innocence of the countryman, his independence and his pleasing arts—the care of hay, of poultry, of sheep, the dairy, the forest, and the reaction of these on the workman in giving him strength and plain dignity like the face and manners of nature, all men acknowledge.
