A Hint to Editors.

C. H. Keeler, editor of the Owego . Y.) Record, sends forth the followg beneficial hint :

Our brethren of the press scarcely alize the importance of working the ame of their towns prominently into very item they publish that is likely to e copie l into exchanges. It is a notable act that people who become familiar ith the name of a town, who have that ame placed before their eyes every time hey pick up a newspaper, will feel a deire to visit that town before they die, nd will never shuffle off this mortal oil contentedly until they do so. Brick Pomeroy made La Crosse, Wis., in this vay. He found it a little town of three housand inhabitants, and he never wrote in item that did not say La Crosse in it or one to four times. People who read he newspapers went fairly crazy over the name, and of those who visited the place enough remained to make it in population and enterprise the second city in the State. It owes this much to Pomerov.

A city editor on the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin during five years never let an issue of the paper go to press that it did not contain an item sure to be copied, speaking of the city as the great primary wheat market of the world. Milwaukee grew from 70,000 to 105,000 inhabitants in a remarkably short time. People were anxious to see the great primary wheat market of the world, and seeing, they settled in and became a part of Milwaukee.

Lewis, of the Detroit Free Press and also of the Vicksburg Herald, is doing more to familiarize the names of Detroit and Vicksburg than all the united capital and enterprise of the places combined could do, and the result will be that he will do more to help build up these towns than anything else that can be brought to bear.

If our friends of the press will follow the plan adopted by our enterprising newspaper men they will find that like to either absolute free trade or too much proresults will follow.

The moral of all this is-and we give it freely-never write an item that will be copied that does not contain the name of your town, and you will be surprised at the results that will follow.

A Neglected Sentry. Capt. John C. Jones, of New York, while gazing The French papers state that a soldier of the first empire, named Jacques Rous sel, has just died at Montpellier (Herault), at the age of ninety-two. He was the hero of a singular adventure, of which a number of journals spoke at the time, and which he himself used often to relate. In 1807, the French took possession of Rugen, a small island in the Baltic, separated from the coast of Pomerani by a narrow channel. It was occupied by a detachment of Davoust's corps, when the order came to evacuate it immediately. The embarkation was so sudden that a sentry was forgottenof the State treasury ; that the nominees of the -no other than Roussel. Ignorant of what had passed, he continued to pace up and down, and no relief having come after three hours, he lost patience and returned to the guard-house, which, of course, he found deserted. Making inquiries, he learned with despair the departure of the detachment. "Mon Dicu !" he exclaimed. "I shall be reported as a deserter. I am lost, dishonored !" and he burst into tears. His grief aroused the compassion of an honest artisan of the place, who consoled him and gave him shelter, and, after a certain period, gave his only danghter to him as a wife. "Pour le coup, they have come for me," exclaimed the frightened sentinel, but a sudden thought restored his courage. He ran to his dwelling, quickly donned the uniform, which he had carefully preserved, seized his musket, and returning to the shore, mounted sentry at the moment when the French landed.

" Qui vive ?" he called out in a stentorian voice. " Qui vive vous-meme ?" replied those from the vessel. "A sentinel." "How long have you been on duty ?" "For five years !" Davoust laughed heartily at the adventure and ordered that a release in due form should be given to this deserter in spite of himself. Roussel lived happily with his family for some years ; but having had the misfortune to lose his wife and only child, he soon felt a strong wish to return to his country. He arrived at Montpellier toward 1829, and resided there ever since upon his savings and a stance of the pride of a child to keep up and succeeded in driving them nine miles appearances, in a way that was touching to witness. The hopelessness of the endeavor was painfully made manifest to her by the well-meant action of her teacher; the facts are these:

Just before the close of the last session of the public schools in that city, an incident took place which, as an illustration, is more than touching. At one of the schools numbers of the pupils were in the habit of bringing a luncheon with them, which at noon they ate together. Among those who did not go home for dinner, the teacher in a particular room noticed a little girl who always sat looking wistfully at her playmates when they went out with their luncheon, but who never brought any herself. The child was always neatly but plainly clad, and one of the closest of students in school hours. The odd action of the child's lasted for some time, when, one day, the teacher noticed that the little thing had apparently brought her dinner. The noon hour came, and the children took their lunch as usual and went out to eat it, the little girl referred to alone remaining in the room with her dinner wrapped up in paper on the desk before her. The teacher advanced to the child and asked her why she didn't go out to eat with the debtedness, and by this action has made it cer rest, at the same time putting out her hand toward the package on the desk. Quick as thought the girl clasped her hands over it and exclaimed, sobbing : "Don't touch it, teacher ; and don't tell, please ! It's only blocks !"

And that was the fact. Having no dinner to bring, and too proud to reveal the poverty of her family, the child had carefully wrapped up a number of small blocks in paper and brought the package to present the appearance of a lunch. It was nothing, a mere ridiculous incident in school life, but it was sufficient to make wiser and older hearts than hers sad.
