Two Storms.

Two storms swept the upper section of this county Sunday afternoon and Monday. Trees were wrenched and torn and telegraph poles blown down by the impetus of the wind. The Sunday storm was almost general throughout this and surrounding counties. The storms, though doing much damage, were supplemented by rains that will in part make up for the havoc wrought by the wind.

Trinkalo on Leather Hill.

A few miles from this city there is a community known as Trinkalo. Its residents are quiet people. History tells of no rowdy occurrences in that vicinity. Then there is a quiet community in this city known as Leather Hill, situated at the corner of Road and Ehringhaus Sts. The rude hand of Rowdysm never let its stain upon either of these communities until Saturday night. Upon that occasion Trinkalo and Leather Hill came in contact. A number of young men from the former place struck the vicinity of the latter like a load of bricks. The youths from Trinkalo were overflowing with booze and the denizens of Leather Hill were treated to a fist fight typical of years gone by. No one was seriously hurt and all parties were out of sight before the police got "next."

A WANDERING YOUTH.

Tar Heel Reporter Finds a Missing Boy.

About two weeks ago George the sixteen year old son of Mr. B. F. Peterson of Coinjock disappeared from his home. His father made anxious inquiries but no one knew where the boy had gone though 'twas thought that he was somewhere in this vicinity. Our reporter found the boy Monday morning and his father was immediately notified.

The boy is small in stature and many would not believe him more than twelve years of age. He obtained employment with Davis and Powers and many may have noticed him trundling the bread wagon around town.

Bryan a Money Maker.

Some time ago The New York Sun said editorial: "When Bryan ran for the presidency the first time he was a reporter on an Omaha newspaper and as poor as Job's turkey. The advertising he got out of the contest set him up as a lecturer, and he soon had a checkbook. He also published a book, entitled 'The First Battle,' and the royalties increased his good nature and gave him an enlarged idea of the main chance. After his second contest for the presidency he started up a weekly paper and drummed up a goodly number of subscribers. He continued to lecture and as he swung round the old family circle he boomed the weekly newspaper. The profits of lecturing, editing and book-making have lifted him above want. He is even said to be a rich man as men go in Nebraska. He has acres, a fine house and stock on the hoof and on the exchange. He is still a candidate for the presidency. Does he ever expect to be elected or is the nomination an asset in his business? After a third defeat would Mr. Bryan start a monthly magazine or incorporate a Publishing house?"
