

An Anti-Tuttle Letter
The editor is in receipt of the following communication and it so well expresses the views of many of our readers that we publish it though coming under an anonymous name as it does. We hope to have a reply from the other side:

EDITOR OF THE TAR HEEL:
In last week's issue of your valuable paper is an article headed "Tuttle's Hot Shots." It contains extracts from Mr. Tuttle's sermon of the Sunday previous, that demand an answer from some more liberal minded source. Mr. Tuttle makes many unfair statements concerning the Fair. He calls it indecent and immoral and in terms that are insulting to many. Now while I am not interested in the Fairs, held in your city, only as a resident of this section; I feel it the duty of some one to pen a reply to those remarks and I here shoulder the responsibility.

I want to ask Mr. Tuttle: if he considers the Fair a church auxiliary or a religious institution? Does he think that its directorship devolves upon the church? And last but not least does this Mr. Tuttle dare think that he can pitch his tent in this section and by clap-trap abuse and a Sam Jones harangue revolutionize the social and business worlds?

The country Fair is purely and simply a business enterprise. It is incorporated and run for the purpose of bringing trade to a city and at the same time advertising the agricultural and industrial pursuits of its section. To draw the crowds its way is the chief aim of the management; for in the number of patrons lies its success. To encourage attendance they must needs have the proper magnets. Temperance lectures, revival services and charity booths will not meet the requirements. The masses demand novelty, amusement, adventure and the opportunity to engage in pastime that will drive away, for the time being, all thoughts of toil and care—the accumulation of a years confinement on the farm and in the shop.

I am heartily in favor of the County fair. True it has faults; but they are visitors of only once a year and the mischief created is but a small item compared with the amusement and instruction they afford; say nothing of the impetus they loan to trade and the business it brings to a community. Let us have another fair next year. Will Mr. Tuttle be here to see it?
