THE PRAYER-ANSWERING GOD
I Kings 18:1-40—February
"Choose you this day whom ye will serve."
—Joshua 24:15.

THE word of the Lord came to Elijah in the third year instructing him to manifest himself to King Ahab, with a view to the termination of the drought. This may have been the third year of the Prophet's sojourn at Zarephath, or it may have been the third year after Elijah's announcement to Ahab. The land of Israel may already have been experiencing a six-months' drought when Elijah announced to the King that no rain was to be expected until he, as God's servant, would announce it or bring it. In any event we have the assurance that the entire period of drought was three and a half years.—Luke 4:25; James 5:17.

When the time was fulfilled God directed Elijah to present himself to King Ahab, because the time had come when God was willing to relieve the drought—when a sufficient agency of punishment had come upon the Israelites for their iniquities—when at least some of them had been called to their senses, reminded of their Covenant with the Lord, and his engagement to give them blessings or adversities, according to their obedience. On arriving at the palace Elijah called for the Royal Superintendent, or Prime Minister, Obadiah. He was a godly man and, of course, distressed by the idolatrous course of the King and the Queen. If he was not sufficiently courageous to protest openly, he was, nevertheless, courageous, for, in a time when the servants of Jehovah were being persecuted to death by Queen Jezebel, Obadiah hid one hundred of them and supplied them with the necessities of life—evidently at the risk of his all. When Obadiah met Elijah and was told to tell the King that Elijah was there to see him, Obadiah feared to do so. He declared that himself and others had searched the entire country over most carefully to find Elijah and found him not. He realized that the Lord had hidden him. He protested that if now he would declare that Elijah was ready to see the King, the probabilities were that, by the spirit or power of the Lord would somehow carry Elijah away. Then the King, infuriated, would cause Obadiah's death; but Elijah reassured him.

When the King met Elijah his first word was, "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" This is the worldly custom. The fearless minister who tells the Truth and relates the Divine prophecy respecting the rewards of evil-doing is held accountable, as though he had caused the trouble. But Elijah was not intimidated. He promptly answered, "I have not troubled Israel, but thou and thy parents' house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord and followed Baal. Three years before the King would have probably ordered the execution of Elijah; but the fulfillment of his word and the unit of hunger had humbled him. He was grieved that the blight should be so long and responded to the demands of the King that the eight hundred and fifty prophets of idolatrous Baalim should meet at Mt. Carmel and that thither all the people of Israel, represented by their chief men, should also assemble. The design, evidently, was a contest between Elijah, the representative of God, and those murderous priests of Baal, proteges of Jezebel.

"Choose Ye This Day"

This gathering of the priests and of the prophets required time, but was finally accomplished. When the meeting convened Elijah declared that it was time to have a contest and showing as to who really was God, Jehovah or Baal. The test was to be that two altars were to be built and two bullocks were to be sacrificed. The Baalites were to provide the bullocks themselves and to make choice of the one for their own altar. Whichever God would answer by fire and accept the offering, would be acknowledged as the truly true God.

To them came the first opportunity. They had the noontime opportunity, when the fierce heat of the sun seemed almost warm enough to set fire to the fat of the bullock. They prayed; they shrieked; they cut themselves with knives, entreating that Baal would answer by fire and prove himself the mighty god. Hour after hour this proceeded until evening, when they were forced to give over and admit their inability.

Then came Elijah's turn. He commanded that water be brought and that the altar which he was to use should be thoroughly flooded with water. No one must have room to say that there was a secret smoulder of fire beneath. And, since the sun had gone down, no one could claim a spontaneous combustion. Then Elijah prayed calmly, earnestly, reverently and the Divine answer came—a fire from heaven consuming the sacrifice and licking up the water in the trough of the altar.

Then the people recognized the difference. They fell on their faces and said, Jehovah is the God! A great lesson had been learned.

A lesson for us is that the masses of Christendom are deceived today, as were the masses of Israel then. And when, by and by, God shall open their eyes of understanding through the agency of Messiaiah's Kingdom, every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. The knowledge of the Lord will fill the whole earth. Complying with the Lord's direction through Elijah, the Israelites slew all the prophets of Baal. We are not to understand this to represent the Divine command to us today to put false teachers to death. We are to remember, as before suggested, that Israel was a special nation with which God dealt in a special manner, and that many of their doings, under Divine direction, were typical of higher things to be accomplished in God's Kingdom. Ultimately, after every false teacher and every willful sinner will be destroyed.

"All the wicked will God destroy." The death of those priests of Baal foreshadowed the destruction in the Second Death of all who work iniquity; but those priests themselves did not suffer the Second Death. Like all the remainder of Adam's race, their resurrection from the dead was provided for at Calvary, and they, as well as all others, must be brought to a knowledge of the Truth and to an opportunity of reconciliation to Commenting upon a statement of the Buffalo Commercial that it has learned positively that the battleship "Maine was not blown up by a Spanish torpedo, but by the explosion of one of its own ammunition magazines, the Boston-Watchman says:

If it had been surely known that the Maine was destroyed by an internal explosion February 15, 1898, war would not have been declared against Spain. Cuba would not have been free, Porto Rico and the Philippines would not belong to the United States, the American Navy would not be the second in power in the world, the international influence of the United States would still be small, Roosevelt would not have been president, imperialism would not have been an issue, the movement for legality and honesty in corporations would not have been inaugurated, the $500,000,000 expended on the Philippines would have been saved, the American battleships would not have made a voyage around the world, and American diplomacy would not have saved the Chinese Empire from dismemberment. If all these things have more cause than ever to "Remember the Maine."

The Watchman, while reading history, apparently, by its superficial, and while taking much for granted in thinking that the end furthered by the blowing up the "Maine" would not have been reached in other ways had that not happened, fails to make itself very clear as to which of the sequences of the war against Spain it puts on the side of national assets and which on the side of national liabilities. In other words, it fails to note which have been blessings and which have been curses. If the "Maine" had not improperly been sent to the harbor of Havana and kept there against the warning of a United States official in Cuba, it would not have been blown up. If it had not been blown up we would not have had that pretext for an unholy war, costing many thousands of lives and in the end billions of dollars. The people of the United States would not have been forced to become a party to politico-financial rottenness which brought about the unholy war. We would not have been loaded with the Philippine Islands. We would not have been driven into the building of a great navy, involving hundreds of millions in cost and still more in maintenance. We would not have been setting the world an example of a war-like nation. The international influence of the United States, through the development of commercial interests, would have been equally as great as through the development of its power for war, for Europe has been more afraid of the dominion of the world's commerce by the peaceful arts of trade than by our arms and navies; and it had so happened that we had had no destruction of the "Maine," and therefore, no Roosevelt for President we would have had the enforcement of laws and the development of legality and honesty in corporation management without the wreck and ruin wrought by the "big stick." We would then have been saved from the development throughout the country of class hatred and of the bitterness which now prevails, the future of which is beyond man's power to discern. The business interests of the country would have been prosperous to a greater extent than they have been. Men would have been better employed, and the country as a whole would have been infinitely blessed, instead of having had to bear the burden of the curses which have come upon it all apparently harking back to the destruction of the "Maine," sent on its mission as a part of a campaign resulting in the inauguration of an unholy war with all its fearful curse of death, billions of money wasted, the burdens of taxation added to the people and the increased cost of living and the increased cost of production of everything by reason of these taxes. Surely we indeed have cause to "Remember the Maine," and to remember it in connection with one of the dark blots upon American civilization.
