Senator Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky drifted into Indianapolis the other day with some terse campaign observations.

He has been stumping in Indiana, helping the Democrats to swing the Hoosier State back to its old allegiance.

There is really in this campaign no point jutting out far enough for one to hang a guess on," said the Kentuckian.

He did have some comments to make upon the listlessness, the like of which, the Senator said, he had never before known.

He also thought the campaign a reminder of the 1892 campaign. On one thing the Senator was emphatic. That is, that Bryan's whirlwind tour through Indiana will help the Democratic party 25,000 votes, and even if the Republicans win, they will have 25,000 votes less than they would otherwise have.

The effect of Bryan's tour on the vote of Indiana is the all-absorbing problem to the politicians of that State. Mr. Blackburn's emphatic statement settles it for many confiding Democratic voters.

"How to Manage a Wife"

The above was the subject of the following prize essay obtained by the late Dr. C. F. Deems, of New York:

"Manage? What is that? Does it mean control? We manage a horse. We use our superior human intellect to control and to guide his superior physical strength so as to obtain the best result. But a wife is not a horse. We two persons are well married the wife is as superior to her husband as a horse is to a man. It is the first business of the husband to manage himself so as to keep himself always his wife's respectful friend, her tender lover, her superior partner, always a superior protector. This will result in making the wife to be his admiring friend, always his affectionate sweetheart, always his loving ward. And this will react upon the husband that his wife will be his loving and only friend.—Ex.
