PILGRIMAGE TO LUXEMBURG

Tourist Tells of Annual Journey to Historic Shrine—Afflicted Thousands Seek Cures.

"I have just returned from a visit to my native state of Luxemburg, which I had not seen for more than 30 years," said Heinrich Hirschberg, of New Ulm, Minn., to the Milwaukee Sentinel. "I arrived in Luxemburg in time to witness the annual pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Willebrodus, who lived in the middle ages and who was afflicted with St. Vitus dance. It appears that after the death of this saint many miraculous cures of persons similarly afflicted were made at his grave, and at the present time the first Tuesday after Pentecost is set apart as his day."

"Thousands of those afflicted with St. Vitus dance visit his shrine on that day. Those who are so ill as to be unable to attend are represented by their relatives, and this representation is said to be as efficacious as a personal pilgrimage."

"For two or three days before the day of the pilgrimage all the railroads running to the little village where the shrine is located were crowded. The inns and kneipen did an enormous business. On the morning of the trip to the church fully 20,000 afflicted persons or relatives of sufferers formed a line about half a mile from the church. It was an inspiring sight. Ten abreast they formed, those in each ten holding hands. Many bands of music accompanied the procession, which started at a given signal."

"To the tune of a sacred march the procession proceeded on its way, the pilgrims marching slowly with a sort of dance step. Four steps forward and two backward, in rhythmic motion, they made the half mile to the church in a short time. The entrance to the church was made with the greatest reverence, and before the altar, in a metallic casket, lay the corpse of the saint, who has been dead for centuries. The casket was opened enough to permit a view of the body, being provided with hinges for that purpose."

"Each passer looked upon the sacred corpse upon the altar genuflecting and muttering prayers and making the sign of the cross rapidly several times. After all had viewed the coffin the pilgrimage was over."

CHINA'S BOWS AND ARROWS

Only in Past Few Weeks Has This Mode of Warfare Been Abandoned in the Orient.

Though an attempt was made two years ago to abolish bows and arrows as the national weapons of China the work has only been accomplished within the last few weeks, asserts the Chicago Daily News. The imperial archers have existed up to the time the royal edict put them out of business about a month ago. The emperor's decree is as follows: "Our dynasty was established by means of the bow and arrow and the art is still therefore kept up in the examination of officials and the drilling of troops. Lately, however, military science has improved and weapons are being modernized everyday and we must imitate the martial spirit of our ancestors by using our best endeavors to establish a strong government."

"Hereafter the princes, dukes and ministers of the eight banners must all earnestly practice military art and attain the utmost proficiency, which will leave no time for the observance of mere forms, and we order all officials in future not to carry the bow and arrow when they attend state ceremonies, nor are imperial body guards or the palace guards to use them, but the best weapons must be provided for them."

"Let the board of war draw up the necessary regulations for the proper testing of military efficiency for the soldiers and let the said board report thereon."

Point of Resemblance.
"Askitt—Ever shaved by a woman barber?
"Knott—Yes; once.
"How did you enjoy it?"
"Oh, she had just as much to say as any other kind."—Chicago Daily News.
