The new proprietor of the North Carolina Military Institute, we learn, is Major Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent of Kirkwood Military Academy, Kirkwood, Miss. He is said to have had twelve years experience as a teacher. It is expected that he will be on the ground early in June and begin preparations for the opening of the Academy in the fall.

Our town is beginning to get excited over the municipal election, and we hear of several candidates for mayoralty. The several candidates are men of action and ambition, and we hope that whoever is chosen for that responsible position will inaugurate a new era of progress in improvement. A great deal depends upon the execution of our laws. There is no use for a board of commissioners to enact laws and regulations if the executive will not enforce them.
