

Happy Homes in Robeson County!

The great county of Robeson has a population of more than 40,000 people and we refer to them as the best people of the earth. Why? Because they are a people of happy home life, which lies at the foundation of greatest development. The county has many valuable and productive farms and prosperous farmers, many successful manufacturing enterprises, many great mercantile establishments, numerous churches and schools and good, intelligent honest citizens. We are glad to be a part of this greatness, mainly by virtue of conducting one of the great mercantile establishments. We invite the 50,000 people of this county and section of country to come to see us in our business home. All need not come on the same day but come any day in the year except Sunday and you will find us glad to welcome you and we can interest you when you call, because we have such a great selection and assortment of merchandise every caller can find something desirable.

Our business was established in January, 1884.—22 years ago and we have worked it, cultivated it, and enriched it, in season and out of season, and the natural results have followed—growth and enlargement.

We feel safe in asserting that our stock of merchandise is not surpassed for extent and variety by any store in the State of North Carolina and we are willing to submit it to investigation to establish our assertion. A visit by the mothers and daughters of our homes will show them that we have the goods desired by them in the Dry Goods line. Special attention is given this line of our business by three expert buyers, one of them being one of the best informed ladies, in business matters, to be found. We assure the ladies that we can show a desirable line Dress Goods, Laces, Trimmings, Notions, Lace curtains.

NEW YORK NOMINEES.

For Governorial Honor, Hearst Nominated by Democrats and Hughes By Republicans.

Charlotte Observer.

The world is more less interested in any prominent nomination that the Democrats or Republicans of New York State make. The governorship of the Empire State generally means a stepping stone to something higher. Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt went from the mansion at Albany to the White House at Washington. We Wednesday the Democrats in their convention at Buffalo nominated William Randolph Hearst, and the Republicans at Saratoga, Charles Evans Hughes to bear the respective standard in the contest for the gubernatorial chair. Everybody knows William Hearst, the proprietor of The New York American and other papers of the same character; he has run for office before. He is the Representative in Congress from the eleventh New York district. He was born in California and is worth many millions. As a member of Congress he has remained a silent looker-on. Securing the nomination by the party of Abram S. Hewitt, Grover Cleveland and David Bennet Hill for Governor of New York State is his greatest achievement.

Hughes is unknown to the people of this section of the country, but he lacks much of being a nonentity. He is a lawyer by profession, and a man of fine character and transcendent ability. Up to last year, when he was called upon to serve as counsel for two prominent committees of the New York Legislature, he had been before the public but little. He is one of the rarest creatures of this century—a man whom office has sought. Hughes is responsible for 80 cents gas in New York city. His greatest work, which has brought him fame, was as counsel for the Armstrong committee, appointed to investigate the alleged mismanagement of certain well-known New York insurance companies. In this position he made an everlasting reputation for fairness, adroitness and loyalty to duty. His labor made the effort of that committee eminently successful. He is described as the fit man that the office must seek. When asked, some time ago, if he wanted to be Governor of his State he said that he would rather follow his profession. He has deliberately sought obscurity.

When Mr. Hughes travels for pleasure he takes with him such books as can't Philosophy, a treatise on solid geometry and Lycurgus. As a school boy he revelled in scientific research. He has genius combined with industry, character with independence. It has been one of his boasts that he never voted a machine ticket; he has never been active in politics, but has always done what he considered to be his duty. He was one of the Jerome nominators last year. He might be called the Puritan in public life; he is modest, shrinking and clean. The Republicans of New York have drafted him to lead their ticket this year. If he is elected Governor he may go to the United States two years hence or be appointed Attorney General, if a Republican succeeds Mr. Roosevelt at Washington. Charles Evans Hughes' the unknown, has stepped before the lime light.

The New York contest this fall will be watched with a great deal of interest throughout the United States. If Mr. Hearst is elected Governor he may supplant William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, in popularity and secure the Democratic nomination for the presidency. There is a possibility what may happen nowadays in New York State. Hearst polled more votes when he ran for mayor of New York city last fall, than any one in this part of the country ever dreamed that he would be able to do. The old fellows are discredited. William F. Sheehan, Pat McCarren, Norman E. Meck, David Bennett Hill, Mayor McClelland and men of that kidney have been relegated and Hearst and Murphy are to the front.

The New Army Bullet

Philadelphia Ledger.

It would seem that in the type of bullets about to be adopted by the army there is a potent argument for peace. The bullet is a third lighter than any now in use but is most deadly. Its penetrating power is such that at a mile it will pass through fifteen men, if these had the mischance to stand in line in front of it. At short range it will go through 39 inches of seasoned oak. At 500 yards 32 inches of white pine fail to stop it, and at 1,000 yards it is equal to piercing 14½ inches. The day when safety lies in dodging behind a tree appears to be passing.

The strong point about this admirable bullet is the flat trajectory. While the present style of bullet, fired at a target 100 yard distant, one could stand with perfect immunity at many points between the muzzle and the target, as at 500 yards the missile would pass 17 feet over his head. The new bullet shows only a 10-foot rise at this distance. Almost the entire space between muzzle and target, would be a zone of danger. Only one favorable point and by experts with the new bullet, and that is a line of accuracy. They think this cannot be overcome, and even if it could not be remedied advanced shooting the field already filled with bullets capable of penetrating whatever they happen to be. The new bullet is to disconcert the enemy.

A Rich Legacy.

Charity and children.

The example of the late Dr. Charles D. McIver in consecrating his powers to the good of his State, will have the effect, we trust, of strengthening the resolution of our youth to live and labor for the glory of North Carolina. We are told sometimes that State lines ought not to be drawn across the career of a young man filled with ambition to do good. We deny the proposition. State lines ought to be drawn and they will be drawn. If Dr. McIver had accepted any of the flattering offers that were made him away from North Carolina, he never would have won that richer and more valuable asset, the love and honor of the people of his own State. He could have made a great deal more money, but in the hour of death how poor and paltry a thing is money. Two young men, brilliantly endowed, started in life together and for years worked side by side. One of them was finally tempted away and is shedding lustre on another State. The other put every offer behind him and poured the treasures of his mind and heart into the work of uplifting the womanhood of North Carolina. The one is honored far and wide, but the other is loved by the people who had gripped his heart. The one is Alderman and the other is McIver. "The applause of listening senates to command" is one thing but the winning of the confidence and affection of the people is quite another. A. C. Dixon, glided in a marked degree, listened to the call from afar and left his old mother. He has gathered honor with the passing years, and if he should die to-day the newspaper would sing his praise and the world listen to the song. Henry A. Brown was deaf to the allurements of "the broader field" and planted himself in the soil of North Carolina; if he were to die to-day the hosannas of the multitude would not be so loud and high, but hearts would break and tears of genuine affection would fall on his grave. Whose is the richer legacy to leave the world? A man can not take root in human hearts in a day, a year or a decade. It is a long process and to do so ambition must be strangled and a patriotic love for one's people must dominate and overwhelm all other passions. Zeb Vance was that kind of a man, but suppose he had run off to Mississippi when he was 30 years old! The man born in North Carolina owes her a debt that it will take a lifetime to pay.

Maj. Anderson and His Pastimes.

Monroe Journal.

Major Anderson is fattening on the fact that the show is coming. There be other people hereabout that cherish much secret pleasure on that score, but lacking the frankness of the Major, they keep their feelings concealed. The Major has adopted Monroe as his permanent home on account of the quietness and good character of the town. But it was getting most too quiet for him. His only diversion for some time has been the reciting of the most bloody passages in Richard the Third and talking with his friends, Mr. Frank Austin of the People's Dry Goods Company. But even these diversions were failing somewhat and the Major was casting about for other means of passing the time, when, lo and behold! here comes along the forerunner of old John Robinson. Having often slept with old John Robinson, the founder of the show, the Major is mildly interested in the John Robinsons, down to the one of the fourth generation who is now traveling with the show. He knows all the old clowns by name and keeps their memories green. Now he is waiting to shake hands with the elephant and feed goobers to the monkey. In the old days when the circus traveled about on wagons of its own, the Major was not unknown on the band wagon. Now he will be only an humble spectator, and the show may congratulate itself if it comes off without undue comparisons of the institution of other days.
