Fall Time.
 Written for The Robesonian.
 De whitefolks say dat springtime is de bes' tim' oh de year,
 When dere sperits allus risin' and dere life is free from care
 But for me I likes de fall time when de leaves 'gin ter fall
 When de dog'ood berries a-turnin' and de bluebird str'ps his call
 When Jack Frost catches all de grass and makes de 'simmons drap,
 My old dog's gittin' restles' and hit's den de 'possum's fat.
 I loves to hunt de 'possum and git 'im up a tree;
 I loves to wink my eye at 'im and see 'im grin at me,
 But be' of all I loves 'im mid some taters and some grease
 I'se bin longin' all de summer fur just sich a kinder feast!
 Soon I kin gather all de crap an' de year's work is done,
 Oh, dis'll be a happy nigger when fall time comes.

SOIL SURVEY OF ROBESON.
A Map to be Made Giving all Information in Regard to County.
 The Government and State are cooperating in making a soil map of Robeson county and Messrs. W. E. Hearu, of the Bureau of soils, of Washington, and G. M. MacMider, of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, of Raleigh, are now engaged in this work around Red Springs. These gentlemen will be working in the vicinity of Lumberton early next spring. The map will show all the public roads, railroads, streams, ponds, private roads, churches, school houses, towns, and postoffices, giving an accurate map of the entire county on a scale one mile one inch. Upon this map will be shown in different colors the different grades or soil types in the county. Boreings to a depth of 3 feet are taken at very frequent intervals which will determine the character of both the soil and subsoil. The soil is classified in the field according to the texture or mechanical composition, color, topography, drainage, and crop adaptation. Several samples are collected from each of the different soil types, one set sent to Washington, D. C., where mechanical analyses are made, and a duplicate set including samples of all phases are forwarded to Raleigh where chemical analyses are made accompanying the map will be a detail description of each soil type, the crops grown, and its adaptation to new or varied crops. Another chapter will give the location and boundaries of the county, early settlement, agricultural development, transportation facilities, markets, and climatic conditions. The last chapter will be a general summary of the agricultural conditions at the present time, relating to all the crops grown, labor conditions, size of farms, tenure of farmers, methods of cultivation and suggestions for improvements, and prices of land. The map and reports will be published and distributed gratis to all farmers to the Bureau of Soils, Washington, D. C. or to the nearest man from this district.
