THE NO FENCE LAW IN NORTH CAROLINA.

A Plea for the Cattle - Nature Intended They Should Roam at Large - More Fences Needed.
 (The writer requests The Robesonian to please copy.)
 To the Editor of The Robesonian.

After waiting for some time in the hope that some one, who might wield a more fluent pen, would take up the subject of no fence law in reply to an article from the pen of Mr. B. F. Keith, published in your and other papers, I feel it my duty, prompted by a spirit of human kindness toward my yet fortunate fellow countrymen who are still resting under the wings of nature's noblest gift of freedom and liberty, to give them a few lines in regard to the No Fence Law. I write from personal experience in my daily occupation and surroundings.

Now, in the first place, I will say, in justice to Mr. Keith, I do not know in what part of our State he lives, and perhaps if I did I might be somewhat more lenient with his views on the subject; yet there can be no argument held forth that could ever win me over to favoring the stock, or no fence, law in any locality, under existing circumstances. I am a farmer's daughter, having grown up on the farm, and it has been part of my life work to tend the stock of different kinds. I know their nature, their habits, their wants and their capabilities. I also know that an all-wise and over-ruling Providence has provided grass and herbs for his creatures that we, his higher animals, can only supply by artificial means. I have been for fifteen years or more living in and out of the territory of the no fence law, and here in Robeson county we do not need it, and the majority did not want it; it was forced upon us by a petition of many forged names of women and children who never even saw it. I know there could be many arguments brought up in favor of stock law; I have lived all along the line of the many provocations that we had to endure before we had this abominable law forced upon such as seeing our cattle and hogs spoiled by some one's little pen with a shabby, unlawful fence, teaching otherwise harmless cows to jump, and our hogs to throw off rails; I have also seen the cattle come home bleeding, shot, cut with axes, knives, etc. We knew this was the work of some worthless coward, "the meanest kind of a person," of course we would say, but when you have tried the no fence law, you will then decide that everybody is the meanest kind of a person. And while all these things are annoying, compared to the many disadvantages and toilsome labor brought about by this law, Mr. Keith speaks of the one or two select cows, and the abundance of milk and butter. In regard to this, I say you can have one or two good cows, and have milk and butter for a short while, but my experience and that of hundreds of others is that the cows in confinement will not stay in a healthy condition for any length of time; and then you will have to be daily planting and gathering for them a change of feed they must have, and then they are subject to diseases hitherto unknown or heard of - indigestion, sore feet, hollow horn and tail - to say nothing of the many unnatural ills they develop when confined. Cattle are gregarious animals, and kept alone they become in a measure insane or idiotic; and there is another great disadvantage: when there is a little herd, or one or two kept for weeks in a pasture, the flies, gnats, mosquitoes, and other insects become a horror, collecting there and remaining there through the entire season, becoming so numerous of evenings as to completely cover the legs and underparts of the cattle, so that one can scarcely discern the animals' color, thus rendering them poor and unprofitable to their owners. This goes to prove to every intelligent, reasonable person, that cattle were intended to roam at large, going one day in this direction, another in that, thus shirking any great collection of insects. If Mr. Keith will just travel over this section of country that I have recently passed over, I feel sure that he and many others would change their minds in regard to many things. Here and there along the roadside is to be seen a poor, forsaken-looking cow, chained to a stake or bush, in reach of scarcely a mouth full of grass, perhaps her chain wound around and around some obstacle binding her down so close she cannot even fight a fly off that is sucking her very life blood; and there she must stand in the scorching hot sun perhaps for hours in this wretched plight, and on every hand, for miles and miles, beautiful woods and meadow lands covered with beautiful, rich, tender grasses and herds, branches of sparkling water, etc., sufficient to satisfy the needs of hundreds of cattle, created for their benefit and privileges and man's universal blessing.

Some one may say, why not build pastures on this land? You will find, when you have tried it, that the pasture system in North Carolina will not prove successful for the reasons, and many more, above mentioned. There are men all over our country who own acres and acres of wood-land, who, if they are men, and not narrow-minded oppressors, are willing that their less fortunate neighbor may own a cow and that she may feed on the land gratis; yet he does not feel able or philanthropic enough to build a company pasture for all those around him who are not land owners. How many children are denied the benefit of good, nice milk in case of sickness? No doubt many die for the lack of it, since this abominable law was forced upon us. And in regard to the section of country where there is no stock law, I have spent some time there no great while since, and can truthfully say I never saw finer cattle, with greater appearance of good milchiness than I saw there, going in herds as God intended them. As to hogs, you may have a few shut up in stifling pens or pastures, but our experience is, it will not do to feed on corn in confinement; you must plant, dig and cut for them daily, for they will not thrive without a continual change of food; and here in our community it is a mistake about their not having diseases - all the difference is, they are not here in most instances to have diseases; but I have known people near here to lose every hog they owned by cholera breaking out in their pastures. Hogs, too, like the cattle, will develop unnatural vices, such as eating chickens, and I have known a sow to turn on her own brood and eat every one of them after they were three weeks old. It is common for them to destroy right young pigs when they are in close pens. This is due to their lack of recourse to their natural element, such as branches, swamps, etc. One who is not a close observer of nature may not know that hogs search the woods and branches for little snakes, water lizards and worms. In the section of country where the no-fence law has never been there are also fine hogs and plentiful, while here in this community there are honest, reliable men who will testify to the fact that they never bought a pound of bacon till since this law was enforced. We and the neighbors mostly are still kicking against the paper sack, tin can, Kansas beef (hold-your-nose-while-you-cook-it) system of living, and still have a few cattle and hogs; and we know only too well what it costs to keep them. They must be daily and I may add, hourly looked after; all our spare time is completely absorbed - no time to visit even a sick neighbor, to say nothing of a spare moment for recreation; and I might almost say, no time to attend church.

This is life in the stock law as we find it. And in regard to the piney rosters destroying the forest, I ask Mr. Keith how came those beautiful and magnificent forests of pine and oak all through this part of North Carolina? They yet are here, and have been far more abundant in the scores of years that have gone by than now, before the no fence law was ever heard of in North Carolina. It is now, since this law is upon our land, that the timber and young growth is destroyed by fires; for this reason: Now fire is set out, and since there are no fences to be protected, no effort is made to stop it, and it sweeps on and on, destroying everything in its track in proportion to the season; and as to our seasons "too wet or too dry," this is a problem too deep for me to fathom; I can only say, I think this a tremendous stretch of Mr. Keith's imagination, to charge this up to "fire and hogs."

No, Mr. Keith, what we need in North Carolina is more fences and better fences, more stock and better stock. Select honest, true hearted, Christian men for our legislators, men who are willing to live and let live, to whom the poor man's interests are as dear if not dearer than the rich oppressor's. And in conclusion I will say, the above given facts are indisputable; and you, my friends, who are halting between two opinions, let me entreat you if you ever pray - and we trust you do - never fail to put in a daily petition that this curse, No Fence Law, may

A Song of Rejoicing - The Union Meeting - "Sarah Jane's" Question Answered - An Ox Team in Lieu of Railroads - Personal Mention and Other Matters.

Correspondence of The Robesonian.
 Well, we're most all glad, But yet a few are sad; But we think they're very bad in their position, For it's been the ruin of all our nation To vote against prohibition. For months and years Women have been shedding tears; But the happy time is coming, And it's no use to keep a shunning. They have been taking alcohol And then a little, yes, and Oh, They made a stuff to make the women cry! But Oh, how glad she is going dry! And as we bid the stuff good-bye, I wonder is anybody going to cry? For it's been the ruin of all our nation In country, town and station. She once was wet, But now she's dry; And Oh, how glad no one can tell, As we bid the stuff farewell!

Well, the union has come and gone and we hope everybody enjoyed it - and I don't see how they could help it, for I never heard better speaking anywhere. There were large crowds here each day. We believe the unions are a great help to our churches. The next one goes to Maxton, and the next to Antioch.

In regard to that most unwelcome question from Sarah Jane, the answer is add it short and it will make it shorter. Try again, Miss Sarah.

Mr. Grover Tyson, of East Lumberton, was shaking hands with his many friends here Saturday.

Wonder what has gone with our Timmonsville correspondent. Let us hear from you, old boy.

We were glad to see Mr. Fred Collins, who has been at Wake Forest, here Saturday and Sunday. He made a good speech in the Sunday school quarterly meeting Sunday. It was enjoyed by all. Mr. Collins is a credit to Robeson county.

Mr. S. E. Martin, of Lumber Bridge, visited friends here last week. Lumber Bridge must be a good place, as Mr. Martin has got so fat.

Mr. Roy Britt, of Cero Gordo, visited friends here last week. We heard of a man the other day who said he wanted to whip one man before he died, and on being asked who it was he said the first man that ever introduced him to his wife. He must have gotten a whipping himself.

We heard of one ignorant man saying he was afraid to vote a dry ticket - afraid it would not rain any more this year. I had just as lief it would not rain any more as to come a flood - of wiskey.

Mr. Oscar and Miss Lula Britt, of Boardman, visited at Mr. I. V. Britt's Sunday afternoon.

Mr. R. R. Barnes, of Barnesville, attended the union here Saturday.

There was an ice cream supper at Mr. Leonard Britt's Saturday night and it seemed that some were glad and some were sad. The writer enjoyed it fine.

Britt & Stephens are moving their logging camp to Marietta. Any one needing a job can get one, as they are needing some hands. If any one sees Mr. Rogers, send him.

We think that some one had better put up a hay baling plant here as the farmers say they have more grass than anything else.

We haven't got two railroads, as has Proctorville, but we have an ox team twice a day most all the time.

Well, we will close, not like the boy told the old lady, "Come and bring Jimmy," but if you can't come, send the dear old Robesonian.

Uncle Sam to Keep Revenue Men in the State.

Greenboro Correspondence. St. Charlotte Observer.
 Since the prohibition election on May 26th there has been considerable speculation as to the probable action of the Federal government in maintaining a force of revenue officers in this State after North Carolina becomes legally "dry" January 1st next, the opinion having been expressed in some quarters that the officers will be withdrawn entirely. It is suggested that the general government will not feel called upon to assist in enforcing a State law, and since this State law abolishes all registered distilleries in North Carolina the occupation of the revenue officer will be gone. Among the officers the feeling seems to be that, while the force will probably be reduced, a number of deputy collectors and other employees of the internal revenue department will be kept on the pay roll in North Carolina.

The revenue force in this State has been reduced to a considerable extent since the Legislature began the enactment of laws restricting the manufacture and sale of liquor and for the past few years, probably, the principal duty of the revenue officers has been to ferret out and destroy blockade distilleries. A deputy collector stated in Greensboro today that, but for the presence of blockaders, he and most of his associates would be without government jobs. It is these same blockaders and the class is expected to grow in numbers in some sections - that will cause the government to keep at least a certain number of revenue officers employed in this State. In this connection a revenue officer is quoted as saying that only five sheriffs in North Carolina have exerted themselves to any special extent in enforcing the provisions of the Watts law, which gives to State and county officers the right to destroy illicit distilleries.

Louisiana's Unusual Prohibition Bill.
 Baton Rouge, La., Dispatch, 3d.
 The prohibition forces in the Assembly made an important attack on the opposition to-day by the introduction in the House of a bill which provides for submitting the question of State-wide prohibition to vote of the people by congressional districts. The bill is unusual from the fact that it is a combination of referendum and local option. By its provisions the districts voting against the saloon would become dry, but whether or not the districts voting for the saloon would remain wet would be determined by the total vote throughout the State.

Six counties - Alleghany, Graham, Hertford, Orange, Tyrrell and Yancey - have never voted special taxes for public schools. Wilkes county leads in the number of its school tax districts.

A meeting was held in Wilmington Monday night for the purpose of taking steps toward establishing another morning daily newspaper in that city. The meeting was participated in by about 100 citizens. Two committees were appointed to make all necessary investigations and report to a meeting to be called later.

The trustees of the A. and M. College at Raleigh received a letter last Tuesday dated London, England, from President Geo. T. Winston, tendering his resignation as president and stating that he had been granted a retiring allowance by the Carnegie Foundation for Advancement of Education. His salary as president was $2,750 a year and the allowance is $2,500 a year. Dr. Winston has seen 35 years of actual service as a teacher and has rendered notable service in the educational advancement of the State. A meeting of the trustees of the college will be held on July 23d, when a successor to Dr. Winston will be elected.

Messrs. McLean & McLean were continued as attorneys for the board at a salary of $100 per year.

A resolution was passed by the board setting forth the necessity of levying a tax of 20 cents on the $100 valuation of property and 60 cents on the poll for necessary road work. A copy of this resolution was served on the board of commissioners, in session on the same day, and this tax was levied, as mentioned in Thursday's Robesonian.
