The opponents of the proposed new counties were outnumbered largely, but there was a pretty fair sprinkling of them, and those who were interested in some way in the proposed new counties entirely filled the hall. They were asked to take their places in different parts of the hall and the hearing began at three o'clock, lasting four hours. It looked very much like a political convention, and from time to time the enthusiasts of each ide gave vent to their feelings by cheers and handclapping, when their spokesmen made some telling point. The Hoke county advocates were allowed thirty minutes, North Robeson advocates 30 minutes, Hoke opponents 45 minutes, North Robeson opponents 45 minutes, and then Hoke and North Robeson were allowed

15 minutes each for rejoinder. Ex-Judge T. B. Womack, of Raleigh, opened the argument for Hoke county. Lack of space makes it impossible to more than mention those who presented arguments for the different sides. Judge Womack made a good plea for Hoke county, showing among other things that it would be a compact county with a popula-tion of 9,000, with Raeford as the county seat. Among others 2-15-4t
