WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—“A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy.”—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

Read What Another Woman says: Peoria, Ill.—“I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night.

“After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured.

“You may publish this if you wish.”—Miss CLARA L. GAUWITZ, R.R. No. 4, Box 62, Peoria, Ill.

Such letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for woman's ills. Why don't you try it?

CLIMAX OF REUNION.

Thousands of Veterans Marched in Annual Parade—A Picturesque Feature—Veterans Ride on United States Cavalry Horses—Three Old Soldiers Answer Final Call.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dispatch, May 29 With flags furled and kits packed, many survivors of the Southern Army who attended the 23rd annual United Confederate Veterans' reunion here, departed for their homes tonight.

Death stalked in the midst of the cheering throng which today participated in the impressive veterans parade. Three aged soldiers who came to renew campaign friendships made during the War Between the States, responded for the last time to their regimental calls.

Robert Nolen, a veteran from Houston, Texas, fell down the steps of the city auditorium. His neck was broken.

B. F. Moore, of Fuque, Texas, who was injured in a fall yesterday, died at a local infirmary today. G. W. Mullenix, of Lindale, Ga., entered a restaurant just after the veterans parade was ended and dropped dead. Several veterans were exhausted by the trying ordeal of today's march, but at a late hour, no additional deaths had been reported.

Scenes tonight at the railroad station brought tears to the eyes of the thousands of visitors who were returning to their homes after attending the reunion. Aged soldiers when parting clasped each other in warm embraces and uttered fervent prayers that they would meet again at the next reunion.

Many were so feeble they could scarcely clamber aboard the trains, but willing hands were ready to assist them.

The climax of the reunion came today when several thousand veterans marched and rode through the city streets in their annual parade, accompanied by sponsors, and escorted by National guardsmen from several States.

Scarcely a person of the many thousand who witnessed the grand spectacle tonight was able to speak above a whisper, so vociferous were their cheers accorded the gray haired soldiers.

Gen. Bennett H. Young, of Louisville, Ky., commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, led the parade on a prancing horse from his native State. Upon reaching his headquarters he dismounted and, standing bareheaded in the sunshine, watched the survivors of the Confederate army pass by. Members of Gen. Young's staff, Governor Hooper, of Tennessee, Miss Kate Daffan, of Austin, Texas, sponsor for the South, and others were guests of Gen. Young on the reviewing stand.

A picturesque feature of the parade was the presence of several negro “uncles” who followed their masters through the War Between the States. A number of these carried live chickens, illustrative of the manner in which they foraged when food was scarce during the fierce campaigns.

They were heartily cheered by spectators and acknowledged greetings with unique bows peculiar to the antebellum.

Proudly bearing tattered battle flags dimmed by powder, smoke and time, the gray clad survivors of the Confederate army marched through streets awed on either side with cheering thousands.

Standards borne by cavalymen almost encountered overhead arches formed of entwined Confederate and United States flags. Nearly a thousand of the veterans were mounted on the prancing horses of the 110th United States Cavalry tendered by the Fort Oglethorpe officials and offering another mute testimonial of the burial of bitterness which characterized the War Between the States.

Hundreds of applauding spectators who witnessed the impressive sight were moved to tears by the flood of memories it aroused.

No division appeared in a semblance of its entirety. Only a few staunch survivors were left of the more than 600,000 soldiers who represented the Confederacy in the fiercest struggle of modern times.

Gen. Young's staff was followed by the 11th cavalry band, survivors of the trans-Mississippi department, the department of Northern Virginia, the department of Tennessee, Forest's cavalry corps and 1,000 mounted veterans.

Interspersed among the different commands were the sponsors of the divisions of the United Confederate Veterans in each instance followed by aged soldiers riding in automobiles. The Richmond Howitzers and other militia acted as official military escorts to the veterans.

The ranks of the veterans riding in the automobiles were swelled from time to time by those who had believed themselves equal to marching in the parade, but who were unable to stand the trying ordeal.

The trans-Mississippi department was headed by Lieut. Gen. K. M. Van Zandt, of Fort Worth, Texas, commander and his staff. Following in class formation were the State brigades.

Next came Lieut. Gen. Theodore S. Garnett, of Norfolk, Va., commander of the army of North Virginia. Brigades in numerical orders and their commanders in this section were Virginia Commander Gen. Stith Bolling, Maryland, Commander Gen. A. C. Trippe; North Carolina, Commander Gen. Julian S. Carr; Commander B. H. Teague, West Virginia; Commander Charles O. Peyton, Georgia; Commander H. Harrison, Opelika, of the Army of Tennessee, rode at the head of the State division in that section.

What was considered one of the most impressive and inspiring spectacles in the parade formed the rear of the parade. One thousand mounted veterans preceded by a cavalry corps of the late Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, who won the name of the “Wizard of the Saddle” during the War Between the States, composed this section. Gen. H. A. Taylor commanded.

The veterans for the first time since the War Between the States were mounted on United States cavalry horses. Many humorous scenes were enacted when the members of the 11th United States Cavalry turned their mounts over to the aged veterans. Some of the veterans had to be assisted into the saddle, but all maintained their seats during the parade, despite the capers of the prancing steeds.

This afternoon the Pied Piper of Hamelin was presented in a local park by several hundred school children in honor of the veterans.

In an official memorial to the United Confederate Veterans tonight Gen. Young calls attention to the significance attached to the furnishing of the government horses to the veterans for today's parade. The memorial in part follows:

“Tents and cots have been tendered by the United States government, but never before have Confederate veterans been supplied with horses for their annual parade. This act of the government toward the people of Chattanooga and toward the veterans is most highly appreciated. Surely this act indicates that all the bitter feeling of the war has passed away. In no other country in the world, save this great republic, has such a thing been possible. It speaks volumes for the spirit that dominates the greatest republic in the world. It shows that in 50 years the passion and passage of the most extended civil war in history has been replaced by a comradeship which is superior to any peace monument.”

Tonight reunion week was closed with a grand ball tendered to the Sons of Confederate Veterans who met simultaneously with the United Confederate Veterans.

The 51st annual fair of the Cumberland County Agricultural Society will be held at Fayetteville October 28-31. The entire grounds and buildings have been remodeled, a new grand stand and floral hall built at a cost of $10,000, and the race track rebuilt.

Some Reasons Why Not

THERE are many reasons why the small merchant should not sit back and let the mail order houses take the cream of his out of town trade. One of them is the parcel post service. Under the zone system of postal rates every merchant within the limits of his own territory may now develop a mail order business on his own account. He can ship goods much cheaper and much more expeditiously than any concern outside his district. Every merchant should at once begin an educational campaign of advertising, teaching the people within reach of his influence that it is less expensive, quicker and infinitely more satisfactory to make their purchases near home than to send elsewhere.
