The October American Magazine.

One of the most astonishing contributions to the October American Magazine is an article by a Yale teacher entitled "The Village of a Thousand Souls." Author of the article, Arnold L. Gesell, has made a complete investigation of the 220 families that constitute a certain small village in the Middle West. His investigation reaches back through one whole generation—thirty-three years. The results of his investigation indicate an appalling amount of feeble-mindedness, insanity, alcoholism and general delinquency in small villages.

In the same issue Ray Stannard Baker writes a really wonderful article about Colonel George W. Goethals, the builder of the Panama Canal. It is an article containing more specific and interesting information about the Canal and its remarkable builder, that has been collected before. Another interesting article in the number is a true story of a morphine fiend who reformed. This article is in a series entitled "Those Who Have Come Back"—a series of true stories of people who, failures or disgraced at forty, have succeeded in coming back to lives of usefulness.

Fiction is contributed by Ines Haynes Gillmore, Henry Wallace Phillips, Leonard Hatch, John Taintor Foote and Clifford S. Raymond.

James Montgomery Flagg and Stephen Leacock write humorous pieces. David Grayson contributes another of his "Friendly Road" sketches. The regular departments, "Interesting People," "The Theatre" and "The Interpreter's House" are included.

The prize winning letters in a contest entitled "How I Saved My First $100" complete an unusually spirited number.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, GAS OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape Diapepsin" Digests 3000 Grains Food, Ending All Stomach Misery in Five Minutes.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, grassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no sour food left in the stomach to poison your breath, with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is awaiting you at any drug store.

These large fifty cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home. ad

The Lighting of School Rooms.

Public school children's eyes are often seriously damaged by poorly lighted school rooms. This fact should be remembered in building school houses.

Modern school architects and hygienists have worked out some definite plans to conserve eyesight, which should not be forgotten. For instance, in Northern countries, where sunlight is less prevalent than in Southern countries, and where fog clouds and smoke are common, school rooms should have one fourth as much window-glass as there is floor space. In Southern countries, where the atmosphere is clear, one-sixth window-glass space is sufficient. The bottom of the windows should be four feet above the floor. Windows should be as numerous as is consistent with safe construction. They should be as far back in the rooms as possible, and to the left of the pupils. The windows should be contained between iron or steel mullions, and their edges should be rounded, to permit the ingress of light and its useful distribution, and to prevent shadows falling on the desks. As the best light should extend to the ceilings. If hills or tall buildings are close to the school prismatic or ribbed glass should be used in the upper portions of the windows, but not in the lower portions, as too much glare is produced. Sliding or slat blinds should not be used. They are expensive and inefficient. Use double shades, so large that chunks of light cannot enter. They should be fastened in the center of the window and should roll up or down, so that light can be admitted from either above or below. Curtains should be light green in color. Black boards absorb much light, and should be covered by light curtains on dark days and when not in use.

Backache

Miss Myrtle Cothrum, of Russellville, Ala., says: "For nearly a year, I suffered with terrible backache, pains in my limbs, and my head ached nearly all the time. Our family doctor treated me, but only gave me temporary relief. I was certainly in bad health. My school teacher advised me to
