KEEP SABBATH DAY HOLY

Third of Sermons by Rev. C. L. Greaves On Ten Commandments—Best Way to Keep the Day Holy is to Spend it in Serving God and Doing Good to Our Fellow Men—How Jesus Spent His Sabbaths—Auto Riding On Sabbath.

A large congregation heard Sunday evening the third sermon of the series Rev. C. L. Greaves, pastor of the First Baptist church, is preaching on the Ten Commandments. As has been mentioned in The Robesonian, Mr. Greaves is preaching a series of sermons on the Commandments, one each Sunday evening. He will preach next Sunday evening on the Fifth Commandment—"Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee."

In beginning his sermon last Sunday evening on "Keeping the Sabbath Day Holy" the preacher declared that this commandment was the only ceremonial one of the ten, all the others dealing with morals. "It was wrong to kill, to steal or to commit adultery before the commandments were written, but until God commanded man to keep the Sabbath day holy it was not a sin to work on that day. There is none but God who can change this ceremonial law." The preacher brought out very forcibly the fact that not only was man commanded to keep the Sabbath day holy, but he is also commanded to see to it that no one in his household, not even the stranger, breaks this holy day.

While we are commanded to make it a day of rest, that does not mean that we are to make it idle rest, but a day on which we are to do service to God, to whom the day belongs; a day to worship God and do good to our fellow man. "Christ declared in his teachings that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath, therefore, it is not a day for men to keep for self, but a day for blessing others." The speaker showed that it was lawful to do anything on the Sabbath day that was good for man.

Jesus spent his Sabbaths going to church, teaching and healing. When we go on all-day excursions, picnicking and spend the day for lustful pleasure we are not keeping the day as Jesus kept it, and laid down the plan for our keeping it. While the preacher did not condemn an automobile ride after a man and his family have attended church services, he declared that to use the whole day for riding over the country, forgetting the church and God, was breaking the Sabbath day. Can a man spend the Sabbath day boat-riding, picnicking or on the beach and at night fold his hands and say Lord, I have worshipped Thee today, because I have walked close by thy side? If so then it is all right to spend the day in that manner.

"While I do not believe it would be a sin to pull an ox out of the ditch that would mean a good sum of money to you, I do believe it is a sin to have an old ox that falls in the ditch every Sabbath day, and one you would pull out if it broke the day into pieces." Jesus helped others on the Sabbath day—a most beautiful way to spend it. While Jesus went into the fields on the Sabbath he didn't go there for the purpose of seeing how his crop was growing, or to plan his work for the next week. About the only way for a farmer not to plant on the Sabbath day is to stay away from his growing crop on that day.

The Jews kept Saturday the seventh day to commemorate the completion of the God's work in creating the earth. The Christians keep the first day to commemorate the raising of Christ from the dead. In speaking of the value of the Christian Sunday, Mr. Greaves said that man needs it both spiritually and physically—that's why God gave it. Statistics show that in the sections where the Sabbath is the least observed there are more inmates in the lunatic asylums. The Sabbath is of great value indeed.

Don't make business trips on Sunday. The more of God's day you take for business, the more the world demands you to take. To have a sincere desire to serve God on the Sabbath day is worth more than rules. You can do any deed of mercy on the Sabbath day and not break it.

Speaking further of the Sunday auto ride, the preacher said: "Frankly I do not believe there is any harm in taking a ride after you have attended your church services. It is not any more harmful to take your family out for a wide than it is to take your wife at home to worry with the children. But to go out and stay out all day, missing your church services, then if you run against a telephone pole and are killed I don't know what would become of your soul. A man with a Sabbath spirit will not have time to ride very much, however. If you have an automobile that is about to get between you and your God you'd better sell it at once."

SUCCESSFUL MEN

JOHN ROACH. John Roach was born in Ireland of poor parents, and at the age of fifteen was sent to America, and landed in New York without money, friends or trade.

His first business venture was made with some other workmen of the foundry. They started a small foundry and called it the Acton Iron Works, which for several years prospered remarkably. But one day the boiler in the engine room exploded, and in one moment Roach was made a poor man again.

Nothing daunted him, however. He obtained credit and reorganized the company which speedily grew. In 1890 he was the lowest bidder and obtained a contract to build the great iron draw-bridge, piers and all, over the Harlem River. Smaller swinging bridges had been built, but nothing like this one had ever been attempted.

He went to work and when he finished the bridge it was said there never was a more complete success in iron work, masonry, and engineering.

The foundation of Roach's success was hard work and thorough knowledge of anything he undertook.
