A BOND IN EVERY HOME.

any sacrifices so far.

A Bond in Every Home.

Mr. Lawrence urged that a house-to-house canvass must be made, that a bond in every home must be the slogan. Workers must go by threes or in pairs, districts must be divided into sections. There will be a speaking campaign. Messrs. Jas. H. Pou and J. W. Bailey, the two ablest speakers in the State, have promised to come to the county, the former for two speeches some Sunday, the latter for 2 days. Their dates will be announced later. There will be an advertising campaign, through posters and through newspapers, and buttons will be given to subscribers. Government Trains at Maxton and Fairmont.

One of the Governments trains of several cars filled with war relics captured from the Germans and in charge of wounded soldiers will visit Maxton and Fairmont. It will be at Maxton from 3:30 to 5 p. m. on October 8, at Fairmont from 3:10 p. m. October 11 till 11 a. m. the next day. Every one will want to see these trains and they will be a great stimulus to bond selling.

Relying on the Women.

Women sold 42 per cent of the bonds sold in the last campaign, said the speaker, and he said he is relying on the woman's committee. He said that he knows of no one who brings to the task more experience, zeal and enthusiasm than the chairman of the county woman's committee, Mrs. L. T. Townsend of Lumberton.

Abstracts of Tax Lists.

Auditor J. M. McCallum, at Mr. Lawrence's request, has, with the help of assistants, at the cost of much time and labor, prepared typewritten lists of the white taxpayers in each township, giving name and address and amount of property listed for taxation. Four lists for each township have been prepared. From these lists estimates will be made of what amount each taxpayer is able to invest in bonds, so that the workers will have the proper information about each person before approaching him.

Chairman A. W. McLean arrived from Washington and came into the court room while Mr. Lawrence was speaking. He was called on and spoke briefly. He spoke warmly in praise of Mr. Lawrence, of how fortunate it was that he had consented to take charge of the campaign, and said he was the most striking example he has ever known of the supremacy of mind over matter. He said he had been thrilled lately by hearing the lavish praise of American soldiers by British, French, Italian and Belgian soldiers, who frankly say there has never been anything to equal the courage and fighting qualities of the Americans. They freely admit that all would have been lost but for the intrepid courage of the American soldiers. The man who was responsible more than anyone else, he said, for the turn of the tide was Gen. Bullard, a son of a native Robesonian, whose reply to the French commander will go down in history. We can't afford, he said, to fail in the Liberty loan, and we ought to double it. None of us has made sacrifices yet. If soldiers are willing to die for the cause it is as little as we can do to lend our money.

A meeting of the woman's committee was held following the meeting of the larger committee.
