

Calomel Users! Listen To Me! I Guarantee Dodson's Liver Tone

Your Druggist gives back your money if it doesn't liven your liver and bowels and straighten you up without making you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel. It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate. Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless. Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

BE. PAIN DAY DEC. 7TH.

Gatherings Will Do Honor to the Most Powerful of the Allies—Britain Bore Great Part in War Against Prussian Domination. (North Carolina Council of Defense.)

On December 7th gatherings in all parts of the United States are going to do honor to the most powerful of the Allies by celebrating "Britain Day." The nation-wide celebration was initiated by the Surlgrave Institution in association with the National Committee of Patriotic Societies, the National Security League, and the American Defense Society.

In view of the great part which Great Britain bore in the war against Prussian world domination, protecting our interests along with her own, it is the plainest justice to acknowledge our debt. Acknowledgment to England is due also for our own sake. If the British navy had not promptly guarded the highways of the world four years and three months ago, and from that day to the close of hostilities, if the Old Contemptibles had not delayed the German advance from Mons and Charleroi to the Marne, the Prussians would have won. They would have taken the French front and flank, would have realized the Pan-German dream, would have seized naval bases all over the world from which to threaten all the free nations, including the United States. The three million Britons and Irishmen killed and wounded in the Great War suffered or died in our cause not less truly than in their own.

It is time, the best time in the world, to take stock of our inherited ideas of Great Britain. There are Americans even yet convinced that Great Britain is our ally only by accident. The Germans industriously told us that England was going to fight German "to the last Frenchman's blood," while holding the world in thrall with a huge navy, blotting out the world's freedom on the high seas, threatening the world with navalism worse than any conceivable militarism. Ignorant text-books of history, traditions handed down from 1776 and 1812, misconceptions of the Irish situation, German propaganda, Hearst editorials, and certain mistaken ideas propagated by decent but misinformed men—all of these have concealed the fundamental truth that Great Britain's attitude towards the United States has been conciliatory, friendly, even liberal.

At the desire of the United States, Great Britain yielded her claims based on the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, gave us a free hand in the canal project, and withdrew a great part of her forces from the British West Indies. In 1898 a British squadron stood by Dewey at Manila; British diplomacy blocked a European coalition against us. The force of the Monroe Doctrine has been derived in large part from British support—of course not philanthropic support, but support based on community of ideals and interests. Great Britain, like the United States, has believed in live and let live, in the rights of small nations, in government by the consent of the governed.

If British ships have kept neutral trade from supplying Germany, if the British blockade and censorship have delayed mails to the continent during war time, it is now clear that the British measures were in aid of our own liberty and security. Great Britain was fighting for her life against a powerful and unscrupulous enemy who sank neutral mails and cargoes and slaughtered non-combatants by the thousand.

When December 7 begins with it the celebration of Britain Day, American citizens will be glad to pay honor to a nation which conspicuously has used its great power for freedom, conciliation, and justice. In Africa, on the high seas everywhere, in Mesopotamia and Palestine, in the Balkans, and especially on the Western front, Great Britain has fought magnificently through bitter trials to a victorious end in which America is proud to be her partner.

Theris Walters Wounded But Getting Along Okey.

Through the Bureau of Communication of the American Red Cross at Washington Mr. D. H. Walters, of Lumberton, R. 3, received the other day the following letter from his son Theris, who at the time the letter was written was wounded and in a hospital in France:

"Rouen, Oct. 23, 1918.
"Mr. D. H. Walters,
"Lumberton, N. C., R. 3.

"My dear Mr. Walters:
"I met your son Theris in one of the local hospitals the other day and he asked me to write you to tell you that he was coming on right well, although he has several wounds. He has been hit in the right side and forearm and the left knee, but none of them are of a serious nature. He is resting quite comfortably and I want to assure that everything is being done for him to give him comfort and to hasten his speedy return to

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GODDEN, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.
