In business, men consider everything but God, and also in building homes. Leaving God out is like making up mortar without lime, or like making up dough and leaving out the yeast. Every home is built around certain ideals. In one home the commercial note is dominant. This is merely a place where folks eat and sleep and prepare themselves for business. There are worldly homes, with every convenience, where God and religion are patronized, but Christ is not the center. There are other homes that are built around Christ. They are the real homes. The innates of such homes are not quoting Scripture or singing Psalms all the time, but you cannot be in such a home long realizing that learn that father and mother are sinful dwelling. and bad. You can trust children raised in a godly home. They may go astray for a while, but if great moral principles and love of God is instilled into

The End of Sin is Death. Romans 7:11-13 was the text Sunday evening. The preacher showed that there are only a few elemental sins. When folks get tired and disgusted with a certain sin that has had "run", the devil takes it out and dresses it up as something new and brings it back. People do not look upon sin as the really very bad thing it is. We will not repent very deeply unless we think sin is very bad. Sin deceives folks. Satan is a master in the art of deception, Selfishness in a small child may not appear so bad, but if allowed to go uncorrected it wil lin later years manifest itself in theft or oppression. All recognize that the wreck of a life is bad, but few are wise enough to see the beginning that must inevitably of Rev. and Mrs. C. R. Hester.

Satan tries to make us think we are. No one are stronger than we are. No one intends to let sin get the mastery of him. A man flatters himself that he is too strong to allow sin to overcome him, as others have been overcome him, as others have been overcome, but it always works out the same way. The end of sin is death, no matter how small the beginning, mankind.
