

OLD KINGSDALE NEWS.

BY H. R. CHURCH.
Old Kingsdale, June 14.—Preaching was held at Smyrna church yesterday, the 13th. Our pastor, Brother Byrd of St. Pauls, gave a fine talk on the Baptist convention which was held at Washington city. He said there were eight thousand delegates besides visitors, men and women who are earnestly working for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom. Just imagine such a mass of people at one meeting and for the purpose and aim of helping the unsaved of the world! Is it not time that we should look toward that day when we shall all stand before the one great Master and receive our reward? We should strive to save some one for the Master and add a star to our crown. Ask your friends, your partner in your work, anyone with whom you come in touch if they have found the blessed Savior. But my brother and sister, do not ask them until your own heart is pure and clean and washed with the precious blood of the lamb. Then when you are sure that you are right with God, go and bring your brother. And we will have our churches full, our Sunday schools filled with merry youngsters and our towns, State and country will be better; the Lord will bless us and we will have one of the greatest revivals this world has ever known.

If we thank the Lord on our bended knee for all we have and are and ask him to lead and guide us, I believe we would see no such high prices, no such profiteering as now; for a Christian man will not try to rob his brother for the sake of his own gain. But we would be loving and everyone would be working for the life we will reach when the trumpet sounds.

Thy Many Blessings.
If you know your brother Needs a helping hand, Now's the time to help him In anyway you can.

Perhaps it's grief and sorrow, Or loss of health or wealth; But do not pass this brother Still crying out for help.

Just ask him if the Savior Has ntered in his soul And has his every movement Under his control.

Tell him how he loves him, And gavs, his life for all, Oh, tell him, brothers, tell him, Of his great love for all.

So if along life's pathway You lend a helping hand, Some day on in the future In that great Judgment day, You'll hear your Savior saying, "Come hither, come to me, And receive thy many blessings That I've laid up for thee.

NOMINATION OF PRITCHARD.

Marion Butler's Was the First "Dark Horse" Nominating Speech At Chicago.

(From Chicago Staff Correspondence of Baltimore Sun.)
Marion Butler, of North Carolina, placed in nomination Judge J. C. Pritchard, of North Carolina.

This was the first "dark horse" nominating speech.

It was delivered by a tall man, with a bristly beard, but nobody paid much attention to what he said and there was much moving about on the floor, delegates flocking toward the exits for lunch, others engaged in animated conversation. The confusion increased so that the speaker had a hard time, making himself heard. The gallery seized the occasion for a social hour and soon the rumble of conversation and scraping of chairs left the speaker on an island in a sea of sound.

Butler urged the nomination of Pritchard as a step that would put an end to any sectionalism that may remain as a result of the Civil War.

The orator, Butler said, wiped out the last vestige of the Mason and Dixon line and cleared the way for the election of a Southerner on the Republican ticket. Now is the time, he declared, to break up the solid South. The soldiers who came back from France are ready to put Americanism above party and vote the Republican ticket in the South as well as the North. They are aroused at the maladministration of the Democratic party, he proclaimed.

Lunches were being passed around among the delegates, and they were more interested in sandwiches than in the speech, apparently.

The nomination of Pritchard, Butler urged, would end the claim that the Republican party is sectional and hates the South. The solid South, he cried is ready to crumble and the Republican party can do this country and the South that service. Another thing that would knock the shackles from the South would be the recognition of the South on the national ticket.

Butler became so emphatic that one of his gestures knocked over a glass of water, sprinkling newspaper men in the press section, to the great amusement of delegates in the front rows. The restlessness of the delegates and the galleries increased. From corners of the galleries came shouts at the speaker and frequent suggestions that he should conclude his speech.

At one time Butler was compelled to halt while a volley of applause apparently raise to down his voice died out. As he resumed speaking the applause, again started and he was forced to stop. As Butler concluded the confusion had become so great his voice was scarcely audible.
