His text was, "I go to my Father."
Dr. Beaman said in part:

This is true of the Master. One is struck with the simplicity and fewness of the words of Christ. Some halt-dozen words involved all His theology, such words as "world", "life", "trust", "love." His great word, though, was a word he imported into the language to express his meaning. That word is "Father." It is set like a level apart. It was the way He always penyel. It was with Him on the cross as the looked down in mfinite pity; it was with Him when the shadow of death, was crossing his face; it was only of the first words as it's lips when the came back from the grave; it was life hast word as he ascended to take His place at God's light hand.
