

Sermons At Star Warehouse Revival

Not Ashamed of the Gospel.

The Wednesday evening service was turned over to Rev. J. H. Fulgum of Trenton, who preached from Romans 1:16: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

God is Angry With the Wicked.

"God is angry with the wicked every day"—Psalms 7:11—was the text Rev. A. E. Paul used Tuesday night to show that if you continue in sin God will be angry with you, that God loved the sinner so much that He gave His only Son for him.

Consolidation of Schools

To the Editor of The Robesonian: With the passing of the "little red school house" into the realm of memory, comes the realization, the fulfillment, of our larger hopes and visions for better things in the consolidation of schools, a plan whereby we may reconstruct and redirect the work of the rural schools on a new foundation which reasserts and reestablishes the ancient principle "equal rights to all."

This means the abandonment of many more small schools scattered throughout our country and the maintenance instead of a few strong well-graded schools. Robeson county has made a good start in this important work, thanks to our progressive board of education and superintendent of schools.

The preacher gave a beautiful picture of the denial of Jesus by Peter, the prayers Christ made on the mountain, and of Pilot refusing to pass sentence on Him; how He was crucified and how He arose and what for.

"What shall I do then with Jesus?" these words were spoken over 1900 years ago. If we just could see what these words mean we would be better men and better women. I wonder how many here that can say "Thy will, not mine?"

that. The same blood that covered the cross will cover your sins if only you will let it. Men today are trying to wash their hands of Christ, but unless you accept Him as your Savior you will be helping to crucify Him again.

What the Gospel Consists of. Rev. A. E. Paul preached a powerful sermon at the Star Warehouse Friday night and many showed that they were interested in the welfare of their souls by going to the altar.

The preacher took as his text Romans 1:16:

The 16th verse was the text Rev. J. H. Fulgum preached from Wednesday night and Mr. Paul undertook to show what the gospel consists of. "For therein is the righteousness of God revealed." The preacher said in part:

"He that believeth not shall be damned, regardless of what denomination you belong to. The world has a false conception of what the Gospel is. Some of you here tonight treat God as your enemy, but He is not. It is sin God hates, not the man. There are hundreds of people in the church that don't know what the Gospel is. It don't mean everything you hear preached. The Gospel is good news. The wicked shall be turned into hell. Is that good news? Christ died, was buried and rose on the third day. Christ died for our sins, and to save us from our sins. That's the gospel. The wrath of God is against all sin and uncleanness. God gave His only Son as our substitute. We thank God He reached down on earth and saved us from an ungodly life. But why God loves us so much as to give His only Son, I can't explain. The remedy for our sins is based on our faith in God. We must believe on Him before we can get the remedy. There is justice for the man who believeth but none for him who believeth not. When God saves us from sin He puts our sins away and remembers them no more. Don't you want your sins forgotten?"

Consolidation of Schools

To the Editor of The Robesonian: With the passing of the "little red school house" into the realm of memory, comes the realization, the fulfillment, of our larger hopes and visions for better things in the consolidation of schools, a plan whereby we may reconstruct and redirect the work of the rural schools on a new foundation which reasserts and reestablishes the ancient principle "equal rights to all."

This means the abandonment of many more small schools scattered throughout our country and the maintenance instead of a few strong well-graded schools. Robeson county has made a good start in this important work, thanks to our progressive board of education and superintendent of schools. The U. S. department of agriculture has issued a valuable bulletin on this from which we quote a few excerpts:

"The consolidated school, no longer seriously affected by fluctuations in school population, becomes an institution with fixed location and belongings, an incentive is given to make permanent improvements to beautify the school grounds, secure modern sanitation and provide ample school room equipment. The large number of children assembled at a centrally located school make possible graded classes and a better division of the school day. Studies can be introduced, which require special equipment and specially trained teachers, such as agriculture, home economics, manual training, music, advantages almost unattainable in small district schools. These centrally located country life schools, too, form convenient social centers for communities; local interests and activities affiliate with the schools so that public use is frequently made of their commodious classrooms as auditoriums. Encouragement is given to the growth of literary and debating societies, social and agricultural clubs, reading circles, athletic and other competition among pupils, and entertainment of various kinds. In the consolidated rural schools all children from the entire township, or district, meet, mingle, compete, strive, make friendships and learn how to work together. The school is free and accessible to all children within its jurisdiction. All the boys and girls, including those in the high school, return home daily and, doing their allotted work or chores morning, and evenings keep in touch with the home and the farm, and remain within the shelter of the home during the most impressionable period of their lives. There is no longer so much occasion for part of the children to attend distant boarding schools or pay board in the nearby towns to attend high school. Class distinctions, which the old district school unconsciously fostered, are broken down and removed. The consolidated school is an institution which not only affords instruction in the various branches of knowledge but also reaches out and touches the communal life and the home life and enriches and enlarges the individual life of the youth as the district school never did and never can do, even under the most favorable conditions.

"The consolidated school encourages permanency of residence of principal and teachers; it attaches them to the school, begets loyalty and enthusiasm and makes possible the formulation of long-time plans. The resident principal and teachers often take the leadership in social and literary activities and having become a part of the community set an example in citizenship for all the children. Through contact with parents as well as with children they learn the character and home life of the latter quite as intimately as the teachers in the district schools and much better than those in town or city schools. Frequent change of teachers reacts unfavorably upon pupils, owing to changes of methods of instruction and changes in discipline. The same broad educational policy which originally led to consolidation generally continues, to dominate school affairs and results in a progressive raising of standards in all departments. Dr. Thomas Wood says:

"The country school should be as good a building as there is in the community. As the cathedral, town hall, public library or capital building represents the civic pride of a municipality, so the rural school house should represent the pride of the rural community. Money expended through the consolidated school yields larger results. The chief defects of the district school system—low attendance and lack of articulation with other schools—are entirely corrected by the consolidation system and this system is even now bringing superior educational advantages to more than a million country boys and girls. Consolidation keeps the pupils longer in school at a time when a day's schooling is the most valuable. The present expenditure of nearly two million dollars annually for the public conveyance of country school children suggests that the American farmer is now preparing on a stupendous scale, patiently to build up a truly American farm life. And the consolidated school organized as a country-life school is to be a substantial part of its foundation."

Consolidation is sweeping North Carolina. It has struck old Robeson. May she have a full and unrestricted right-of-way. He who opposes consolidation is only opposing a force as mighty as an army with its banners, and is madly trying to stand in the way of progress. We would like to see the day come speedily when all of Robeson's numerous country schools shall be merged into six or eight A grade schools.

Let's think on these things. If there be any merit in these things, try them.

FRED BROWN.

Boll Weevil in Dillon.

"One hears a whole lot of talk these days about the boll weevil and no doubt lots of the tale, one hears are greatly exaggerated," said County Agent Epps while talking to a Herald man the other day, "but the Clemson experts who have been camping on the trail of the weevil since he started out this way tell us he is bound to make his appearance in Dillon county this year in uncomfortable numbers. I have been told that you could take them out of stump holes in Kirby township by the handful, but this may be an exaggeration like many other reports that have come to our ears time and again. If the weevil comes in big numbers this year the only way we can beat him is to get off an early crop, and with the crop from 10 to 15 days late at the present time we have got to do some fast work and have some mighty good seasons to get ahead of him."—Dillon Herald.

Confesses to Murder of Father.

Orlando, Fla., June 3.—John R. Bryant, charged with the murder of his father, on the stand in his own defense here, today, told the jury that "I threw the weight which killed my father." He said he had killed his father after a quarrel and an attempt by the elder Bryant to shoot him, the only cause of failure being the snapping of the cartridge in the .44 caliber pistol, with which the father had tried to kill the defendant.

Bryant added that he had buried the old man on the shores of the lake, and when, on his return to the house, his wife questioned him, he told her that he had "killed father."

This bears out the story told by Mrs. Bryant to the press last week.

They never made a cigarette like this in my day— The Camel idea wasn't born then. It was the exclusive expert Camel blend that revolutionized cigarette smoking. That Camel blend of choice Turkish and Domestic tobaccos hits just the right spot. It gives Camels such mellow mildness and fragrance! The first time I smoked Camels I knew they were made for me. I knew they were the smoothest, finest cigarette in the world, at any price. Nobody can tell me anything different.
