McPhaul's story of the affair as told Sheriff Lewis was that he, Skipper and an Indian, whose name was not given, were riding in McPhaul's car, that just beyond Harper's Ferry Skipper got out on the running board and was playing conductor when he fell "like a sack of fertilizer," his head striking the ground; that he and the Indian put Skipper back in the car and drove back through Pembroke; that they asked a doctor whom they met on the street what was the matter with Skipper and that he said he would be all right if he got some of that mean liquor out of him; that they drove to Red Springs and put Skipper out on a street near his home. There Skipper was found by some negroes and later Mr. Beiton Walters came by in his car and carried Skipper home, McPhaul told conflicting stories at first but the one given above was the only connected story.
