

"Mothers Who Have Brought A Child Through Many Ills You Know This Is True"

Third of a Series of Interviews With W. L. Hand.

"Mothers, who have brought one child through infancy, you know that there is a close relation between several of the most common every-day ailments of children—constipation, indigestion, colds and biliousness.

"You know that a laxative is needed in every one of these conditions, but that the common type of laxative fails in many a case because it does not have sufficient influence on the liver.

"Often you feel that the case calls for calomel and castor oil. Yet you hesitate to give the dose because it causes so much distress that you would feel brave to take it yourself.

"A Household Necessity. You know you would give almost anything for a pleasant, palatable liquid remedy that would take the place of calomel and castor oil, not only for the children, but for your-

is one of the few counties which maintain separate schools for whites, Indians and negroes.

In his address, Senator Varner stated that the state has spent $148,000 in Robeson county in an effort to advance the educational opportunities of the Indians. Recently he accompanied a delegation of Indians to Washington, and he remarked that they made a fine impression at the nation's capital, from a physical standpoint. They accompanied him to Washington in the interest of a bill which would provide for the attendance of Cherokees at all government schools. That bill is in charge of Representative Lyon and the people of North Carolina hope he will be successful in getting congress to pass it.

There is a considerable tribe of Western North Carolina Cherokees and it probably will be surprising that this state's Indian population numbers approximately 15,000—Wilmington Star.

CAROLINA EDUCATING HER INDIANS

The assemblage of 31 Indian schools at a county commencement attended by 3,500 in an Indian community in which there are 8,400 school children, would seem to indicate a very considerable Indian population. At this county commencement one of the features was a parade a mile and a half long, participated in by 1,400 Indian school children, accompanying floats of various kinds representing each school.

That Indian school commencement was not in Oklahoma, or Montana, or Wyoming, or in the Sioux country, but it was here in North Carolina. The commencement was held at Pembroke, Robeson county, a few days ago. It was held in the Indian normal school at Pembroke, a handsome new brick building completed by the state of North Carolina only a few months ago. It is one of the best equipped schools in the state, and it is for the higher education of the Indian population of Robeson county—the Eastern Cherokees. These people inhabit a large area within 60 or 70 miles of Wilmington, and education is revolutionizing a once neglected people into well ordered communities of prosperous people.

The Robeson county Indians take a very keen interest in education and there is zealous rivalry between the 31 primary graded schools. Fifteen years ago there were 1,100 Indian school children in the county but there is now an enrollment of 3,400 pupils. Many are anxious for college education and Representative Homer Lyon of this congressional district is using his influence at Washington to secure admission for Eastern North Carolina Cherokees into the national collegiate institutions of the United States.

State Senator L. R. Varner, a brilliant and eloquent member of the Lumberton bar, was the commencement orator.

He commended the fine work of Prof. J. Newbold, state superintendent of Indian teachers, who is preparing for a six-weeks summer school for teacher training. County Superintendent of Schools J. R. Poole attended the commencement and spoke concerning the progress of education among the Indians. The statistics were presented from his own county school records. Robeson

Child-birth

WHEN the Little One arrives, you can have that moment more free from suffering than you have perhaps imagined. An eminent physician, expert in this science, has shown the way. It was he who first produced the great remedy "Mother's Friend." Mrs. C. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa., says: "With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse and then they hid to the instruments, but with my last two children I used 'Mother's Friend' and had only a nurse; we had no time to get a doctor because I wasn't very sick—only about ten or fifteen minutes." Use "Mother's Friend" as our mothers and grandmothers did. Don't wait until today, and meanwhile write to Bradford Regulator Co., 24-76 Atlanta, Ga., for a free illustrated book containing information every expectant mother should have. "Mother's Friend" is sold by all drug stores—everywhere.

COTTON CO-OPS WILL HAVE BOOTH AT KINSTON SHOW.

At Eastern Carolina Exposition Cotton Co-operatives Will Have Exhibit to Aid Cotton Growers.

Raleigh, April 5—Farmers who visit the Eastern Carolina exposition at Kinston April 8, 9 and 10 will find a most interesting and educational exhibit among a number of others. The North Carolina Cotton Growers' Cooperative association has arranged a booth which is to be not only a display that will interest but is planned to aid the cotton growers of the counties which take part in the exposition.

A complete grading and classing office is to be at the exposition under the direction of Fred T. Haas of the Raleigh office and every farmer who still has cotton on hand is welcome to bring samples of the cotton for expert grading and classification. This invitation is open to all farmers whether they be members of the association or not. There is no charge for the service, which is intended to really benefit the farmers.

Another feature of the exhibit will be a boll weevil exhibit with full instructions as to the poisoning method of fighting the weevil.

The purpose of the association in making this exhibit is to illustrate the importance of better cotton seed and better methods of making the crop. In caring for the exhibit, Mr. Haas will have the assistance throughout the exposition of thirty leaders in the cooperative work, selected by the local organizations of Lenoir, Greene and Wayne counties.

They have stood the test of time

Repeated counts made at service stations and on the road prove the large percentage of motorists who standardize on "Standard" products. After all the true test of an article is: "Does the public keep on buying it?" "Standard" products have stood this test for over 50 years.

Business men know the importance of time as the final test of the value of a product. Only those products survive which fill the public need year after year. Standard Oil Company's kerosene, lubricating oils, gasoline and greases have stood this test.

These products have been leaders in their respective fields for two generations. They are accepted as standards today. Why? Because they are produced by the most experienced refiners in the country, men who for 54 years have left no stone unturned to improve the quality of their products.

The Standard Oil line is standard in fact as well as in name. You can make certain of getting the right oil or gasoline only by using the name. It is easy to remember.
