The annual Barkers-Ten-Mile com-munity picnic was held Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Town-send and was attended by some two-hundred people, mostly from that favored community but including quite a number from Lumberton, St. Paul and ther and farther removed places. Nobody who gets an invitation to one of these delightful annual events, inaugurated some years ago by Mr. H. H. Stanly, ever thinks of missing one of them unless providen-tially prevented; for such invitations are coveted and prized. Each one of these occasions seems to be better than the last, which is to say that each is so delightful and per-say that each is so delightful and per-fect that comparison is not possible except by way of an Irish bull—"one is as good as another and far better." In the shade of the fine oaks in the yard of this splendid rural home the dinner, barbecue and otherwise, was spread on a long table and was dis-cuested with keep relish by the entire crowd. This was a part of the day's proceedings wherein every one shone. Barbecuer Unsurpassed.

There may be people who can bar-becue pigs as well as Mr. H. H. Stan-ly, but one could not be found the country over who could excell him. It just isn't done. Mr. Stanly has it down to a fine art, and when he probecuing can do for that particular pig has been done and that the result will melt in your mouth with a sweetness like unto the sweetness of a well-cooked tender spring chicken.
