New Fashions.

THE subscriber having very lately received from his correspondent in Philadelphia the latest fashions from the celebrated shop of Webb & Windermere, of that city, is now ready to do all kinds of work belonging to the Tailoring business. He pledges himself, that all those who may favor him with their custom, shall have their work done in the best style of the fashions of the day, and on reasonable terms. Travellers, and others, who wish garments made on short notice, can be accommodated with a whole suit, or a notice of two days. Others from a distance punctually attended to.

THOMAS Y. CANON.

Salisbury, Aug. 11, 1823. 66

Tailoring Business.

THE subscriber having established himself in the above line of business, in the towns of Lexington, Davidson county, respectfully tenders his services to the citizens of that place, and the surrounding country. He invites all who wish garments made, to call on him, and give him a fair trial. He intends to make arrangements for procuring the latest fashions; and will strive to do his work in the most approved and durable style.

Orders for work, sent from a distance, will be punctually executed.

Cotton Saw Gins.

THE subscriber has now on hand, for sale, at his shop in Salisbury, on Main Street, Cotton Saw Gins, of his own make, which he will warrant to be as well made as any in the State. He will constantly keep gins for sale; and will do all kinds of repairing, on short notice, and reasonable terms.

SAMUEL FRALEY.

Salisbury, Aug. 18, 1823. 67

Selling unusually Low.

THE subscriber is now receiving a large assortment of DRY GOODS, HARD-WARE, CUTLERY, DOMESTICKS, &c. from New-York and Philadelphia, selected by himself with care, and bought on the best terms. Being anxious to secure a continuance of his present respectable custom, he has come to a determination to offer his extensive stock of Goods in Salisbury, at prices which, in his opinion, will be found as low as the price of those who advertise "selling off at cost." His customers and the public generally, are invited to call, examine, and judge for themselves.

NATIONAL POLITICS.

FROM THE RALEIGH STAR.

To the People of North Carolina:

In a government like that under which we live, emanating from the people, where all power is derived mediately or immediately from them, and where each member of the community has a portion of the sovereign power residing in himself, it becomes the people to take a deep interest in all questions arising, which may affect their happiness; and it devolves upon them, as a bounden duty, not to remain inactive and unconcerned when their energies are necessary to the protection of their rights. In every branch of our government—in every department, civil, military and judicial—the people are the impulse which sets the great machinery in motion. The time is now at hand, then, when you are called upon to determine, in your minds, who shall be entitled to your suffrages for the next presidency; and in this all-important question, in which the most invaluable principle of civil liberty is secured to you—a right of choice of rulers—let it be said the people of North-Carolina have not been indifferent—that they have maturely considered the subject—that they have weighed well the claims of the different candidates, and that they have wisely selected the man from whose character it may be fairly inferred his administration will at once result in the happiness of their own state, and of the general good. You have in nomination for that high and responsible office, men, whose characters and public services entitle them all to respect—men who have, in different situations, filled, with honor to themselves, and usefulness to their country, the most exalted stations within the gift of the government. From among that number you are to make your choice; in doing which let it be said North-Carolina has bowed to no influence—has been subject to no control; that she has stood forward upon her own responsibility, determined to think and act for herself upon a question, in the determination of which her voice is not among the least important; that she has pursued that course of conduct which marks with falsehood those who dared to assert that her vote would be regulated by Virginia; and that, by an independent vote, she has proven to the world she is not ignorant of her own importance.

Among the number of those who are candidates for the presidency, where can we find one whose character secures to us what we have reason to expect from JOHN C. CALHOUN? In him we find combined the three great qualifications, honesty, capability and faithfulness to the Constitution—a man, who, by a long train of services to his country, has proven to the world that the promotion of her happiness is the ruling principle of his conduct—who, in every situation in which he has been placed, has given us the most unequivocal evidence of his superior talents—whose liberal sentiments and opinions in the cabinet are in strict accordance with the great mass of the people, and proclaim him an anti-radical—whose view of men and measures is with the penetrating eye of one ready to detect the least aberration from the path of political rectitude—and, in short, whose whole course of public conduct marks him the disciple of Washington. Such is the man who North-Carolina should support, and with a patriotic exultation deserve him the daily increase of his friends, and, while in Congress, had a principal hand in the legislative measures for the increase of that valuable means of defense. He was equally zealous for the protection of Manufactures, and supported the tariff of 1816—17, by which our coarse cotton manufactures were saved from total ruin, and have, at last, become equal to the demand for domestic consumption. The system of Internal Improvement by roads and canals, which passed both Houses, and was rejected by President Madison, on constitutional scruples, was drawn up by Mr. Calhoun, and received the whole support of his powerful eloquence. He bore a distinguished part in the great measure of restoring specie payments, and, to promote this object, lent his influence to carry the Charter of the National Bank. On his appointment to the War Department, he found that branch of the administration in great disorder, and applied himself, with great vigor and industry, to its reformation. The staff was organized on a new plan: every branch was endowed with a distinct existence, and guarded by a system of accountability, reaching from the chief to the most subordinate.

The Military College was resuscitated, reduced to order and discipline, and supplied with the most able professors. A general survey of the assailable points on our sea-coasts and land frontier was commenced, under the superintendence of the corps of engineers, and a general system of fortification is now in progress. It is conceded by all parties, that the expenses of the War Department have been greatly reduced, under this gentleman's administration. The radical party in Congress claim the whole merit of this reduction, while Mr. Calhoun's friends impute the saving to the admirable system of order and accountability introduced by him. It is probable the truth lies between them. No more money can be legally expended than is legally granted; but the attention or inattention of the head of department to the manner of expenditure, may occasion a vast difference in the results produced.

And in these, Mr. Calhoun's administration of the War Department is certainly very creditable.

Mr. Calhoun's education is understood to have been as complete as is usual in the best colleges in New-England. His subsequent reading has embraced every branch of political science and liberal
