" Golden Days of Commerce."-Monday morning, "bright and early," says the Norfolk Herald, speculation was briskly stirring in the commercial walks of Norfolk, and in two hours nearly all the coffee and all the cotton, to be found, was bought up. This sly attack upon our unsuspecting merchants was principally from abroad. Some of our neighbors of Richmond and Petersburg, having received advices took the steam boat which happened in their way in the nick of time, got here on Sunday night, and before breakfast the next morning, pretty nearly swept the market. In the mean time, as the news began to get affoat, expresses were started off in every direction to pick up all the cotton they could find-and it is said that all the small grocers through the country have been drained of every grain of coffee, at retail prices, much lower than they can now buy it by the bag. POSTSCRIPT.

To the Editor of the Western Carolinian !

SIN: As a citizen of the county of House, I feel very much mortified to hear the malignant and unjust clamour against a petty Tax, which was assessed by the county court, for the very laudable purpose of erecting a Bridge across the South Yadkin River. The importance of this measure to our county, will be readily adno matter in what section of the county he may be situated. To the ignorant inquirer, information should be given in the language of truth, which I am sorry to say has not been done in every instance hitherto. April, 1825.
