

THE MARRIAGE.

FOR THE WEDDING.

To Louisa, as the prospect of Marriage.

O! little think you, Love's a traitor,
When he promises all bliss;
Oh! he leads with human nature,
By his wiles, to wreath'd bliss.

O, how all our eyes are blinded,
The repeated warning's o'er!
And on vain, crazy-minded,
Such—as the' we strive for Hear's.

Will Louisa pause, and weigh well,
Ere she takes a step for life;
Will she, for a change, thus say—'Well,
'If I'm wretched, I'm a wife'!

If you will, I can't prevent you;
Yet, remember what I say—
When we love, you may repent you—
My prayer is, that you never may.

Charlotte, & C. Sept. 1825.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

The lover'd o'er his infant form,
And his would she have suffered too!
She wiped off his pale, warm brow,
Diso'ring nature's gentle dew,
To make his transient rest more sweet,
No sight could take her from her seat—
Nor slight her constant order touch—
Whole days and nights she calmly sat,
And watch'd him with an angel's care;
And yet her dark blue eye was bright—
Exhausted nature gleamed not there,
Save when its lovely orb was veil'd
With Pity's soul-dimov'ing tear.
Which from her bosom's recess came,
And diamond'd its lustre with a tear.

CONTENTMENT.

Contentment, my dipled maid,
The brightest daughter of the sky;
Who dost thou to the best repair,
And from the gilded palace fly?
I've traced thee, on the peasant's cheek,
I've heard thee, in the milk-maid's smile,
I've heard thee, loudly laugh and speak,
Amidst the sons of want and toil.
Yet, in the circles of the great,
Where fortune's gifts are all combined,
It's sought thee early, sought thee late,
And never thy lovely form could find,
Since then from wealth and pomp you flee,
I ask but competence and thee.

A FRUITFUL ADVICE.

Out of wood—and clothing scant—
Dry goods due for—hats in want—
Children fretful—wife complaining—
Credit difficult sustaining—
Notes to manage—discounts rare—
Belt enough—can't live on air—
Though I would by no means sue ye—
Think ye—do I not want money?

A FREEDOM CHOICE.

When Loveless married lady Jenny,
Whose beauty was the ready penny,
"I chose her," said he, "like old plate,
Not for the fashion, but the weight."

MISCELLANEOUS

OF THE PULSE.

The pulse of a healthy person, rising in the morning, beats sixty-five in a minute; but after the fatigue of the day, it will in the evening beat eighty in that time; and again, by the night's rest or sleep, it will become less frequent, till in the morning you will find it return to sixty-five. For the voluntary motions of the muscles, and actions of the external and internal senses, urge the venal blood on to the heart, which, being thereby of tenor stimulated, makes more frequent contractions. This is the cause of those paroxysms or fits of increase, observable in all fevers towards the evening. For sleep not only retards the motion of the blood, but of all the other humours and actions in the body.

It is one of the curious observations of Dr. Hales, that the pulse is quicker in small animals. He found the pulse of a horse slower by half than that in a man, namely, thirty-two only in a minute; whereas in a dog, the pulse beat ninety-seven in that time. And this we see is conformable to the blood's heat, measured by the mercerial thermometer of Fahrenheit's scale. For the blood in oxen, horses, and other large animals at rest, being five or six degrees cooler than in us, will not rise to our heat, but by labour; whereas, dogs, cats, and fowls, are five or six degrees hotter than we (viz. about 102) and the latter, when sitting or brooding on their eggs for young, are still four or five degrees hotter, viz. 107 or 108, which is commonly the heat of our blood in the fit of an ague; where it is observable, that during the greatest sense of cold chill, the blood is three or four degrees hotter than in health, after which it gains four or five degrees more in the height of the hot fit, viz. 104 or 105 degrees; but in ordinary fevers, where the pulse beats 140, the heat of blood will still be four or five degrees higher, viz. 110; i. e. two or three degrees more than equal to a brooding hen.

The pulse is more quick in children, and becomes slower in persons as they grow older. The salient point of an ovum beats 234 in a minute. New born infants have their pulse 120, and thence down to old age

TEMPERATURE OF THE GLOBE.

La Baron Fourier, Perpetual Secretary to the French Academy, has just made known his important discoveries on the temperature of the celestial spaces and the planets; a full account of which will appear in a forthcoming number of the European Review. Among other facts of the highest importance, the author has demonstrated that it would take more than 30,000 years before any perceptible diminution of heat could take place on the surface of the earth; and that, from the time of the Alexandrian school to the present time, that diminution had not exceeded 1/3100th of a degree.

This is not only the non plus ultra of mathematical calculation; but it is also very satisfactory for us to learn, from such high authority, that we are safe 30,000 years to come!

THE NEWSPAPER.

Of all the publications which seem from the press, none are so interesting, none are so useful, as the Newspaper. Books treat for the most part, on particular subjects, and on the particular matters which they discuss, may be replete with instruction. But the information gleaned from newspapers, is not confined to any one subject—it is general in its character, and every person may find something to please his taste. Do you prefer history?—the newspaper is a standing history of the times. Do you wish religious instruction?—the newspaper affords it in the positive examples of the good, and the native examples of the wicked. The newspaper gives the latest discoveries in geography and astronomy—it tells what improvements are making in mechanics, in agriculture and in domestic economy. It furnishes an account of the proceedings of governments, and thereby enables the people to know and judge of the propriety or impropriety of measures adopted by their Representatives. It is, when managed with integrity, "the tyrant's foe, the people's friend."

THE CONDUCT OF LIFE.

Shakespeare complained, perhaps, more than any man that ever lived, a thorough knowledge of the world, with a great poetical genius. Many passages from his works might be cited to verify this opinion—but the extract which follows, is sufficient proof of the assertion. This quotation from Hamlet, might be written in the pocket-book of every young man just entering the world, and be occasionally referred to, with advantage. There is no condition of life to which the counsel will not apply, and almost every person may be confidently appealed to, in some one instance or another, for its justness and truth. It is the advice of a father to a son—setting out on his travels:

"Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportioned thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel,
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment.
Of each new-hatch'd, unfiled comrade.
Beware of entrance to a quarrel;—being by,
Bear it, that the offender may be aware of thee.
Give every man these ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be,
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all—to thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
That cannot then be false to any other man."

READY HIT.

At the celebration of the 4th July at Ogdensburgh, a sturdy son of Erin happened to be present from the Canada side. When the toasts came to be drunk, Pat, who by this time began to feel the fire of Patriotism glowing in his heart, rises to give his toast "May the President of the United States," says he, "go to the gallows" at this, indignation reddened the countenances of Columbia's sons into flame, and poor Pat would soon have been ousted, perhaps, into the mighty river St. Lawrence, had he not at the same instant very opportunely finished his toast in this manner—"to see King George hung."

Some years ago, one of the convicts in Botany Bay, wrote a farce, which was acted with great applause at the theatre in Port Jackson. The noted Barrington furnished the prologue, which he ended with these lines:

"True patriots we; for be it understood,
We left our country,—for our country's good."

RANAWAY from the subscriber, on the 17th August, a negro man FREDERICK, about six feet high, yellow complexion, pleasant countenance, an excellent fiddler, and very fond of the company of white people; has a plentiful store of impudence, and has with him a quantity of good clothes. He was seen in Greenville district, South-Carolina, on the 26th of August, riding a small poor horse, his fiddle tied behind him, and in company with a suspicious looking white man, who was on foot, and said he had bought the negro of me, and that he lived in Greenville district. The above reward will be given for the apprehension of the negro and white man and their confinement, so that I can get hold of them, or twenty dollars for the negro, and thirty for the white man.
