Married lately, at East Machias, state of Maine, Mr. James Pigeon to Miss Ann Beam. Upon reading this marriage, some mischievous wag wrote the following pun:
A lonely Pigeon, young and fair,
The dupe of many an idle dream,
Forsook his wandering thro' the air,
And lit, by chance, upon a beam:
Where, safe from storms, and quite at rest,
He found a partner to his nest.

POETRY.
THE MEETING OF SHIPS.
BY MOORE.
When o'er the silent seas alone,
For days and nights we've cheerless gone,
O, they who've felt it know how sweet,
Some sunny morn, a sail to meet.
"Ship ahoy!" our joyful cry,
Sparkling at once is every eye.
While, answering back the sounds we hear,
"Ship ahoy!—what cheer—what cheer?"
Then sails are back'd—we nearer come—
Kind words are said of friends and home—
And soon, too, we part with pain,
To sail o'er silent seas again.

MELANCHOLY.
All things are touch'd with Melancholy;
Born of the secret soul's mistrust,
To feel her fair ethereal wings
Weigh'd down with vile degraded dust:
Even the bright extremes of joy
Bring on conclusions of disgust.
Like the sweet blossoms of the May,
Whose fragrance ends in must,
O give her, then, her tribute just,
Her sighs, and tears, and musings holy;
There is no music in the life
That sounds with idiot laughter solely:
There's not a string attuned to mirth,
But has its chord in Melancholy.

BIOGRAPHICAL.
THOMAS ADDIS EMMET, Esq.
FROM THE N. YORK ALBION.
The melancholy death of this excellent man and distinguished advocate has been announced to this community, and excited a sympathy as honorable to its possessors, as it was justly merited by the eminent virtues of him whose sudden and appalling demise, all hearts deplore.
When an individual in ordinary life, whatever may be the purity of his character, and the general elevation of his views, is snatched away from us, the loss penetrates the hearts of friends, and perhaps destroys forever all the bland and soothing joys, all the affectionate endearments of the social circle in which he moved; but society feels not the event that has occurred, and the great machine rolls on with the regularity of undisturbed and noiseless progression. But when a man like Thomas Addis Emmet, whose name is engraven on the imperishable tablets of history—whose genius and whose eloquence have received the unbounded tribute of both hemispheres—whose public and private course, whether a patriot or father, was a combination of unspotted honor, of the gentlest and kindest affection, and the warmest charity—the simple beauty of whose life was a commentary on what man may be in this transitory world; when such a man is struck down to the remorseless grave, the blood rushes back to the fountains of the heart, and we are lost in wonder as we contemplate the strength and unaccountable providence which has hurried him so suddenly away. Emmet passed from before our eyes like a bright vision—he stood but now in the glorious panoply of talent and eloquence in the very hall of judgment, pursuing the noble career he had embraced with an ardour and devotion rarely witnessed at any time, but almost never at his period of life. We heard his last effort, which like the increasing splendor of the sun as it sinks to rest, seemed to grow yet more radiant with feelings and energy, and all the attributes of genius—and in another moment the heart that was ever filled with the noblest sentiments, and the colossal mind which could patiently examine the arena of practice—unravel the knotted combinations of falsehood or comprehend with its grasp the profoundest questions of government and politics, were palsied by the cold hand of relentless death! It is a consolation to those who loved him that he died in the full possession of his unrivalled faculties, and in the rich affections of all those who ever approached him.

To this community which he has so long served, his loss is a severe one, but to his brethren of the Bar, perhaps his loss is irreparable. The amenity of his manners, the urbanity of his deportment, the excellence of his heart, and his kindness to the youngest members of the profession, all render him a model for imitation, and are forever engraven on the hearts of those with whom he was associated. Of that Bar he might well be called the father—"et decus et tutamen"—perhaps we may say, without offence, to those who survive him, that whether we regard the virtues of the heart, the high sense of honour which characterized every action of his life, or the displays of forensic talent, he has not left his superior behind him.

Mr. Emmet was born at Cork, April 24th, 1764 his father was a physician of great practice and reputation, and resided at Dublin—and Mr. E. after receiving a most liberal education, devoted himself to the study of medicine. After passing sometime at Edinburgh, he visited the schools of the Continent, and returned to Dublin, having made all the acquisitions, which unremitting labor and a vigorous mind could achieve at that period of life. We believe, however, that Mr. Emmet practised but little; and the death of an elder brother who even in this talented family was pre-eminent, changed his determination, and gave a direction to his future fortunes, and laid the foundation of his future fame. Dr. Emmet wished him to embrace the profession of his deceased brother, and he immediately entered into its studies with an ardour proportioned to his future success. Called to the bar, he was immediately distinguished among his cotemporaries, and might have looked to the highest honours of his profession, had he squared his politics with his interest. Becoming the associate and friend of Curran, O'Connor, and Grattan and Keogh, he espoused the cause of Ireland—a cause which at last brought his brother to the scaffold; and he was one of the executive committee of united Irishmen in the memorable rising of 1798—and actively engaged in the organization of that society and its plans for revolutionizing Ireland. Such was then his reputation at the bar, that he was invited to the important office of defending Archbishop Hamilton Rowan; which he declined from the best motives, and yielded that task to the firmness and fearless devotion of Curran. He was soon called to experience the fate of his client and with M'Neven and many others, he was imprisoned in the jail of Dublin, on a charge of high treason. After remaining here for some months without any overt act charged against him, overtures were made by the government to him and the other prisoners to detail the plan of the intended revolution, and the names of those implicated in it, as the price of their release. The proposition was rejected with indignation, as a reflection on their honour. Dr. M'Neven and Mr. Emmet were the committee who received the offer. The prisoners were then removed to Fort George in Scotland, and thus the bonds which bound Mr. Emmet to a father, a gallant brother and an affectionate sister, were severed forever. After two more years of lingering captivity Mr. Emmet was released, and passing to France, he sought in her sunny skies oblivion of past sufferings, and the reparation of a shattered constitution.

In 1804 he found a resting place in New York, and soon won his way to popular favour and professional reputation, and helped, by his matchless eloquence, to add another triumph to the universality of Irish talent. He first distinguished himself here in defending some fugitive slaves, and astonished his audience by the ardour of his enthusiasm, and the novel excellence of his manner. He held for a short time, in 1812, and '13, the office of Attorney General of this State, but soon resigned the appointment, and never after sought or occupied a public station.

Simple and unostentatious in his private life, Mr. E. devoted his whole soul to his profession; midnight vigils too often followed the severe labours of the Forum—and no client ever complained that the merits of his case had not been perceived and sustained. His knowledge was profound—his researches to his last moments unremitting. He possessed a mind of extraordinary comprehension, and the strongest and most extensive powers of analysis—he enjoyed the secret of identifying himself with his case, and adding a sort of personal interest to his professional obligation. Endued with a brilliant imagination, fortified with accurate and discriminating views of English history, and enriched with all the fruits of various knowledge, and blessed with a noble enthusiasm—he appeared at the bar the very model of a learned, accomplished, and eloquent lawyer.

American Wine.—The editor of the Darien (Georgia) Gazette, says: "A few days ago, a gentleman of this city politely presented me two bottles of Wine made by Thomas M. Call, Esq. with a request that I would give my opinion of it, which I do with pleasure. One bottle was made from Grapes which he denominates the Warrenton, native grape. This Wine, to my taste, is similar to a rich wine such as I have often drank at Cyprus as a breakfast wine. The other bottle is from a grape he calls the Violet. This wine approaches nearer to the Marsala, or, as we term it (Sicily Madeira) than real Madeira; though a little too sweet for either. It is to be hoped that Mr. McCall will continue his exertions in promoting the culture of the vine; and that Georgians, grateful for those patriotic efforts will amply compensate his labors."

The following lines, addressed to Congress, were written by a Revolutionary Soldier in Kentucky, adapted to the National tune, "Hail Columbia." If they are not very poetical, they can claim the merit of truth.
Hail Columbia, happy land,
Hail great Council, high you stand!
Remember those who placed you there
Through eight long years of bloody war,
While you could neither feed nor pay
The men who now to you do pray.
Remember we as Rebels fought
And independence to you brought.
We ask not arms as beggars do;
A contract was 'twixt us and you;
We humbly ask you to fulfil
Engagements made, and pay the bill.

In the Legislature of Pennsylvania, there are eighty-one friendly to the election of Gen. Jackson, fourteen for Mr. Adams and five doubtful, in the House of Representatives.

GENERAL SUMMARY.
APPALLING FACTS.
It has been ascertained that in the city of New York there are 3000 licensed grog shops; that at least three-fourths of the tenants of the Alms House become such in consequence of intemperance; and that nine tenths of the cases which are brought before the Justices of the Peace, arise from the same source. As the annual expense for City Poor is about $80,000, it follows that $60,000 is the annual tax laid upon our citizens by this vice, to say nothing of the large amount which is voluntarily paid by its victims.
N. Y. Observer.

Union of Lutherans and Calvinists in Germany.
At the Synod, lately held at Hanau, the Lutherans offered to renounce the use of unleavened bread at the celebration of the Lord's Supper—on which the President, Iber, rose, and said, "reach forth the hand of fellowship; we are now united." The assembly rose simultaneously, and the Calvinists embraced the Lutherans in the true spirit of Christian love, while no dry eye was seen in the place.

Dangerous Question.—A simple hostler being one day at confession with his priest, was asked by the father if he had never greased the teeth of the guests' horses, to prevent their eating their allowance of hay and oats? "Never," replied the ostler. In a subsequent confession, the ostler acknowledged the frequent commission of that fraud. "How," said the priest! "I remember at your last confession you said you had never done so!"—"No more had I then," answered the ostler; "for till you told me I never knew that greasing a horse's teeth would prevent his eating; but since you first put it in my mind, I have been tempted to practice the fraud."

Original Anecdote.—Most of our readers know that General Greene, of the Revolution; and General Brown, now Major General of the United States, were by education, both Quakers. The latter not long since attended the Quakers meeting in this city. After service, a worthy Friend remarked to a bystander: "During the revolution we had a Green Quaker and now we have a Brown Quaker; but they were both true blue." [Phila. paper.

Prince Metternich.—It is stated in a letter from Vienna, that this distinguished nobleman, the greatest diplomatist in Europe, is about to lead a plebeian to the altar, in the person of Mademoiselle De Levkam. She is the daughter of a female French opera dancer—young, and very pretty. All the Austrian aristocracy are in commotion at this mismatch. It is even said that the credit of this powerful diplomatist may be shaken by the circumstance.

Toad in Stone.—A piece of stone from a lime stone quarry at Warrall, N. Y. upon being broken open in September last, was found to have a cavity in which was a live toad. The cavity was barely large enough for the toad to turn round, and is coated with a crystallized or sparry substance. The stone is a portion of a solid rock sixteen feet below the surface.

THE WORLD.
The world which the young men figures to himself smooth and quiet as the lake in the valley, he will find a sea foaming with tempests and boiling with whirlpools; he will be sometimes overwhelmed by the waves and violence, and sometimes dashed against the rocks of treachery. Amidst wrongs and frauds, competitions and anxieties, he will wish a thousand times for seats of quiet, and willingly quit hope, to be free from fear.
Rasselas.

Physic.—Doctor Ward mentions a case of one Samuel Jessup, who died at the age of 65, in 1817. This man in the course of twenty one years, took two hundred and twenty six thousand nine hundred and thirty four pills, and forty thousand bottles of mixture!

BRITISH CABINET.
It would appear to be a difficult task to get the British Cabinet again completely organized since the death of Mr. Canning. By almost every arrival we have information of various changes, which although not materially affecting its character, yet we think, go to shew its want of stability. Thus one of the latest London papers received in this country states, that the arrangement now is, that Lord Tenterden is to be Speaker in the House of Lords; that Sir J. Scarlett is to take his place as Chancellor, and that Mr. Brougham is to be Attorney General.

A meeting of citizens of Newbern in this state, was lately held for the purpose of memorializing the next Congress, on the subject of improving the navigation of the several Sounds and Rivers, which empty themselves into the Ocean at Ocracoke bar, and particularly the Swash, or great obstacle within a few miles of the bar, and which it is supposed may be removed by the constant use of dredging machines.
