

POETRY.

FROM THE DUBLIN LITERARY GAZETTE.
Hast thou never met with eyes unseen on earth before?
That yet a sweet mysterious light, like years of friendship were?

Variety.

It is said that two persons, belonging to the Temperance Society, meeting with a bottle of brandy, and the weather being very cold, concluded to take a dram, as they thought it would do them good; one of them observed that they ought to ask a blessing, before receiving the dram and pressed the duty on his friend, and during the time of prayer drank all of the Brandy. When the petitioner ended his prayer he complained of being thus treated; he was answered that he had not done right, for the scriptures say that we should watch as well as pray.

Marriage.—Look at the great mass of marriages which take place over the whole world; what poor, contemptible common place affairs they are! A few soft looks, a walk, a dance, a squeeze of the hand, a popping of the question, a purchasing of a certain number of yards of white satin, a ring a clergyman, a stage or two in a hired carriage, a night in a country inn, and the whole matter is over. For five or six weeks two sheepish looking persons are seen dangling about on each other's arm, looking at waterfalls, or making morning calls, and guzzling wine and cake; then every thing falls into the most monotonous routine:—the wife sits on one side of the hearth the husband at the other, and little quarrels, little pleasures, little cares, and little children, gradually gather round them. This is what ninety nine out of a hundred find to be the delights of love and matrimony.

Pope speaking of his literary pursuits at one period of his life, says, "I followed any where as my fancy led me, without any design but that of pleasing myself, and was like a boy gathering flowers in the fields and woods just as they fell in my way—these five or six years I look on as the happiest of my life."

I love, says Prince De Ligne, the silliness of sensible men; but idle blockheads are like footmen in an antichamber—they slobber, they slander, they are inquisitive and insolent.

If the riches of both Indies, says the elegant and amiable Fenelon; if the crowns of all the kingdoms of Europe were laid at my feet in exchange for my love of reading, I would spurn them all.
