

It probably has not escaped the notice of some of our readers, that we suggested the speech of Mr. Clay would be so constructed as to designate the belief that he is willing to a modification of the tariff, when in truth his policy, if acted upon, must be the American system with the strongest chords upon the backs of the Southern people.

It probably has not escaped the notice of some of our readers, that we suggested the speech of Mr. Clay would be so constructed as to designate the belief that he is willing to a modification of the tariff, when in truth his policy, if acted upon, must be the American system with the strongest chords upon the backs of the Southern people.

Upon what are the complaints of the South bottomed? It is that the tariff is unequal and unconstitutional. An unequal tariff is a constitutional necessity. It is declared in the constitution that the duties shall be uniform. A protective tariff is unconstitutional because protection cannot be found in the constitution.

It may not be generally known, and therefore proper to be stated here, that Luther Martin, a man distinguished for his eloquence, greatness of mind and disinterested patriotism was chosen and sent as a delegate from Maryland to the convention, which drew up the present constitution of the United States.

And though there is a provision that all duties and imposts shall be uniform, it is laid to the same amount on the same articles, in each State, yet this bill now prevent Congress from having it in their power

How literally has the prediction of Luther Martin been fulfilled? Imposts have been laid by Congress in defiance of the clause of uniformity which are paid almost exclusively by the Southern States. These imposts have been laid for the protection of domestic manufactures, which power, this same great man declared to be in the hands of the people.

We refer the reader to the first page of our paper for an extract from a letter from a Member of Congress to the Editor of the Charleston Evening Post, respecting Mr. Adams's course with regard to Mr. Clay's proposed compromise. He will see that Mr. Adams has taken a stand against the compromise—that he is amongst the friends of the South and the Constitution.

COMMUNICATIONS.

To the people of Western Carolina.

That the people of this State ought to have the sole and exclusive right of regulating the internal government and police thereof. That no man or set of men are entitled to exclusive or separate emoluments and privileges from the community, but in consideration of public services.

That a frequent recurrence to fundamental principles is absolutely necessary to preserve the blessings of liberty.

In the last paper the writer closed with the declaration of his belief that the sense of the majority of the people of North Carolina was decidedly adverse to the exercise of arbitrary power and favorable to the amendment of the present form of their government, because of its manifest inequality.

As the writer assumes, a majority of the people are favorable to an amendment of the present constitution, or the formation of a new one, by what authority does the Legislature reject their call for a convention, for that purpose? Is the Legislature clothed with powers paramount to those which appertain to the people, in whom, says the bill of Rights, the sovereignty of the State is vested?

What are these abuses and errors? They may be summed up in a few words. The minority of the people govern North Carolina when it is the right of the majority. This is the very definition of a despotism. Is a despotism such a government as is recognized by the principles of political liberty contained in the bill of Rights?
